Cites Attica incident

Assemblyman says Rockefeller is unfit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York assemblyman today accused former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of engineering the police assault at Attica prison and then trying to cover it up with lies.

Assemblyman Arthur O. Eve, a Democrat, who introduced a resolution to impeach Rockefeller after 43 persons died in the Attica prison violence in 1971, was the leadoff public witness at House Judiciary Committee hearings on Rockefeller's nomination to be vice president.

The assemblyman charged that Rockefeller is unfit for the job and urged the committee in a prepared statement to "delve into the reasons why the governor attempted to cover up the atrocities committed by troopers and others under his orders."

Then under questioning from committee members, Eve went even further.

"Are you charging the governor deliberately engineered an assault to go in and kill people?" asked Rep. David W. Dennis, R-Ind.

"Yes," Eve replied.

The assemblyman said Rockefeller had full knowledge that the word that two hostages had been killed early in the prison siege was allowed to filter among prison guards and state police, who finally stormed the prison on the sixth day.

Eve charged that the coverup consisted of "lies" including one that prisoners killed police and hostages and slit a man's throat during the prison assault when a medical examiner revealed later that the police and hostages had been shot by fellow officers, not prisoners.

Then deputy state correction commissioner Walter Dunbar, who announced that prisoners had killed police and slit a man's throat, has said since that in the confusion following the assault he thought that his announcement was true and later corrected it when he found it was not.

Rep. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio, said he found it hard to charge Rockefeller with knowledge of any lies being told by state officials and Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., asked if it wasn't possible state officials had lied to Rockefeller.

Eve said "that's possible" but said if that was true Rockefeller should have taken some action against them.

Other witnesses scheduled for today included a representative of the National Right to Life Committee, which opposes abortions, and Curtis B. Dall, chairman of the Liberty Lobby, a conservative organization.

Rockefeller completed his initial testimony Friday. The House committee was scheduled to complete hearings next week and vote on his confirmation the week after.

The Senate Rules Committee approved Rockefeller's confirmation Friday nine to zero.

Prosecution rests case on Watergate cover-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecution today rested its case against the five defendants in the Watergate cover-up trial.

In the almost six weeks since they were selected, the jurors heard 28 prosecution witnesses and more than 20 hours of White House tapes.

"At this time the government rests its case in chief," said Associate special prosecutor James F. Neal.

The lead-off defense case will be offered by lawyers for former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. They are expected to call only five or six witnesses.

Before the defendants begin presenting their cases, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica was to start hearing moves for directed verdicts of acquittal.

Apart from Mitchell, two of former President Nixon's closest assistants, John D. Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman, also face charges in the lengthy conspiracy trial. The other two defendants are Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson, two laywers for the 1972 Nixon reelection committee.

The final prosecution witness was Anthony J. Passaretti, a Treasury Department agent for 30 years.

Passaretti, detailed to the special prosecutor's office, traced $429,500 in cash paid the original seven Watergate defendants.

After reading all of the testimony in the trial so far, Passaretti compiled an elaborate flow chart, much like one which might demonstrate the flow of raw materials to a factory and the production of a finished product.

His chart showed that of the $429,500, $210,000 went to Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. or his former lawyer William O. Bittman.

Earlier former White House aide Egil "Bud" Krogh testified that he, and not Ehrlichman, was responsible for the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Under questioning by Ehrlichman's defense lawyer, William S. Frates, Krogh said that the break-in had been bungled and could be traced to the White House and so went beyond any instructions or authority he had from Ehrlichman.

Ford, Brezhnev sign arms-reduction pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford returned from his Soviet summit meeting with an arms-reduction pact that an aide called "one of the most significant agreements since World War II."

The pact reached between the President and Soviet Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in Vladivostok placed a numerical limit on the number of U.S. and Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched missiles carrying multiple independently targeted warheads.

The agreement includes bombers for the first time.

It's understood that Ford is awaiting a written Soviet statement detailing the exact terms of the verbal agreement before announcing publicly the numbers of warheads and missiles systems involved.

"Ceilings on the strategic forces of both nations have been accepted," Ford told an airport welcoming audience Sunday night. "A good agreement that will serve the interests of the United States and the Soviet Union is within our grasp."

Ford will brief Democratic and Republican congressional leaders Tuesday and other members of Congress later in the week. One official indicated the President might reveal details of the agreement in a nationwide television address within a week.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen, who praised the agreement as one of the most significant since World War II, predicted that the summit would produce a SALT agreement that almost certainly will be signed next year.

Former President Richard M. Nixon "could not achieve this in five years" but Ford "achieved it in three months," Nessen said.

The agreement was called a breakthrough in strategic arms negotiations by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. Kissinger told reporters in Vladivostok that the total number of Soviet missiles, bombers and other delivery systems would be below current Soviet strength. U.S. missiles in place in Europe would not be counted against the American total, he said.

The Soviet Union has more and larger missiles, while the United States has more multiple warheads and intercontinental bombers.

In a joint communique signed by Ford and Brezhnev in Vladivostok, a Soviet port city on the eastern coast, the two nations said a long-term nuclear weapons agreement "would be a significant contribution to improving relations between the United States and the U.S.S.S.R., to reducing the danger of war and to enhancing world peace."

The communique also expressed the leaders' concern about "the dangerous situation" in the Middle East and reaffirmed an intention to bring about "a just and lasting peace." It called for resumption of the Geneva peace conference as soon as possible.

Ford was greeted upon arrival at Andrews Air Force Base by his wife, who did not accompany him on the journey because she is recovering from breast cancer surgery, and one of his daughters, Susan.

Abandon their threat

Four hijackers are arrested

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Tunisian officials today arrested four Palestinian hijackers who abandoned their threat to blow up a British airliner and its three crew members in return for a promise of asylum.

The four left the plane with seven other terrorists who had been flown to Tunis from Egypt and the Netherlands as ransom for the plane, its three-crew and more than 40 passengers.

The guerrillas used as shields the three flight crew members, the last of the hostages, as they left the plane. They later turned them over unharmed to Tunisian officials.

Asked under what conditions the government arrested the hijackers after promising asylum, Foreign Minister Habib Chatti said his government had only "verbally accepted the (hijackers') conditions.

"There was no agreement, even less any written conditions or a commitment," Chatti said.

It was not clear what would happen to the seven ransomed terrorists. "They are in a safe place," Chatti said. "A decision on what to do with them will be taken later in consultation with the other Arab governments and the Palestine Liberation Organization."

He said it was premature to say whether the hijackers would be placed on trial for murdering a German passenger on Saturday.

Chatti paid a special tribute to the role played in the tense negotiations by Salah Khalaf, reputed leader of the Black September terrorist group and second in command of the Al Fatah organization. Khalaf was sent to Tunis on Friday by PLO leader Yasir Arafat to help with negotiations.

The Palestinians left the aircraft after Tunisia's information director announced that the government had decided to grant them asylum.

Chatti was asked about the earlier announcement but he did not give a direct answer. He said no decision has been made on whether the men will be prosecuted.

He said the men were in a suicidal mood when they discovered that no Arab country would give them sanctuary. "We were concerned with saving the lives of the three British crew members and also of the seven Palestinian prisoners, whom we also regarded as hostages from the moment they were handed over," Chatti said.

The hijackers, the seven Palestinians and the Britons evacuated the plane without incident. Explosives experts then examined the jet and made certain that no active explosives had been left on the plane.

The grant of asylum was the third major concession to the guerrillas. On Saturday, Egypt flew to Tunis five Palestinians being held in Cairo. The Dutch government flew in two

The remaining hostages, with the exception of three crew members, were then released in exchange for the seven prisoners.

Earlier the Tunisian government said the terrorists, members of an extremist splinter group that opposes the Palestine Liberation Organization, made two demands: that they not be handed over to the PLO and that they be granted total immunity.

Virtually every Arab country refused the terrorists' requests for asylum. The PLO, the main Palestinian organization, vowed it would go after them and "make them, not the Palestinian people, bear the responsibility and pay" for their crimes, according to the PLO news agency WAFA.

Krogh testified Friday that defendant John D. Ehrlichman, his former White House boss, drew him into the Watergate cover-up to keep secret the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Before lawyers for the five defendants begin the defense, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica was to hear arguments for separate trials or directed verdicts of acquittal from two defendants, Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson.

High school area patrols are ordered

Mayor Jerry Jones said Monday that he has ordered Police Chief William Miller to resume regular patrols of the area surrounding Smith-Cotton High School.

Regular patrols have not been in effect for the last three weeks, school officials indicated last week. Police were under orders to patrol the high school area only if they were not involved with other activities.

School officials had requested the patrols in response to recent disturbances at the school, some caused by non-students who frequent the campus area. Such individuals had been suspected of dealing in drugs.

The report of the Pettis County grand jury, released Saturday, said drug incidents at the high school had increased "tremendously," and recommended regular police patrols.

Jones said he told Miller he wanted the patrols run on a regular basis near the high school, the only exception being when "unusual circumstances" prevented it.

The mayor said the patrols would be made during times requested by school officials. These were during the half hours before and after school and during the 90-minute lunch period.

Seasonal commuting decision reversed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that thousands of Mexican laborers may legally commute to the United States for seasonal farm work.

The 5 to 4 decision is important to California and Texas farmers who rely heavily on alien workers.

The court reversed a decision of the U.S. Circuit Court in Washington, which outlawed seasonal commuting.

The Supreme Court upheld a portion of the circuit court decision which permitted alien workers to enter the United States on a daily basis.

"If alien commuters are to be abolished or if seasonal commuters are to be treated differently than daily commuters, the Congress must do it," Justice William O. Douglas wrote for the Supreme Court.

Joining the majority opinion were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist.

Speaking for the four dissenters, Justice Byron R. White said the federal law governing alien workers "simply will not bend to allow the proportion which the government and the court adopt."

In other actions today the court:

—Refused to decide whether the government can be held liable for discriminating against women workers before the Equal Employment Opportunity Act was passed in 1972.

—Declined to decide whether a school system where white pupils are the minority can transfer all whites to a single integrated school. The case originated in Wilcox County, Ala., where 3,733 black and 109 white pupils were enrolled last year in public schools.

—Declined to decide whether a union can give preference in job referrals to U. S. citizens. The court refused to review a federal appeals court ruling that "classifications based on citizenship, like classifications based on race, are arbitrary and invidious."

—Let stand a lower-court ruling that 18,000 acres in the state of Washington, including part of the city of Tacoma, is really an Indian reservation.

—Let stand a New York State Appeals Court decision that New York was obliged to provide welfare benefits for the unborn child of a pregnant single woman living with her parents, even though the woman herself was not on welfare.

—Refused to block a Maryland program designed to provide up to $3 million in aid to five private, church-related colleges.

No action against Franklin considered

Police Chief William Miller said Monday he would not consider taking action against Detective Sgt. Perry Franklin, which was recommended Saturday by the Pettis County Grand Jury, until he "receives something concrete and official" from Circuit Judge Frank Meyer.

"I'm not doing anything based on a newspaper story," Miller said. "I assume that when Judge Meyer goes over the findings I will be notified if he feels it is necessary."

The grand jury's suggestion that "appropriate action be taken" against Franklin was based on profane and derogatory comments Franklin allegedly made to two agents of the state Department of Revenue regarding City Attorney Robert Liston. Franklin also reportedly told the agents he would be willing to sign a false statement to "get" Liston.

The grand jurors were informed of the incident in sworn testimony by the two state revenue agents.

Mayor Jerry Jones Monday said he did not know whether the council will discuss the grand jury's recommendation with regards to Franklin at a special meeting scheduled for 5:15 o'clock tonight in the Municipal Building.

Jones noted that under the merit system the council does not have the authority to take action against any police officer with the exception of the police chief and assistant police chief.

In other grand jury developments, Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said Monday morning that his department would not be able to start serving the grand jury indictments until the afternoon.

An unspecified number of indictments were given to Judge Meyer Saturday morning along with the grand jury's report. Circuit Clerk Bill Lyles was ordered to issue the arrest warrants, to be served by the sheriff's department.

Before an indictment is served Judge Meyer will direct the amount of bond to be set.

The judge said Saturday morning that on Dec. 9 he will review the indictment situation "to ascertain the number of unserved warrants and to determine whether names should (continue to) be suppressed."

City Council awaiting call from candidate

Pending the outcome of an early afternoon telephone conversation, the City Council is expected to vote on a recommended candidate to be the city's next economic development director at 5:15 o'clock tonight at the Municipal Building.

Don Broaddus, chairman of the Economic Development Board, Monday morning indicated the board's recommended candidate was to contact him early in the afternoon regarding his decision to accept or reject the position offered him.

The board selected the candidate Wednesday night following an interview conducted in the Municipal Building.

If the candidate indicates he will accept the position if approved, Broaddus said, "we'll vote on him this afternoon." If he doesn't, "well, we'll just go back and interview some more applicants," he added.

The candidate will not attend the council session.

In addition, the board will also enact an ordinance approving the assigning of the lease agreement on the Permaneer building from the Permaneer Corp. to the McGraw-Edison Co. Ford announces nomination of Zarb to FEA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced today he will nominate Frank G. Zarb, now an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget, to head the Federal Energy Administration. Zarb, 39, will succeed John C. Sawhill, who was fired from the post, which is considered by Ford one of the most important energy posts of his administration.

Zarb was reported by Press Secretary Ron Nessen to have passed all his FBI checks and security clearances as well as conflict-of-interest probes. He is Ford's choice to replace Philadelphia businessman Andrew E. Gibson, who withdrew as the nominee over disclosure of a $880,000 salary settlement from an oil firm which he headed, Nessen said.

In making the announcement, Nessen said the President emphasized the importance of this post as being "the most critical to the development and implementation of national energy policy."

Dedication is attended by about 250

Approximately 250 persons attended the dedication ceremonies for the Virginia Flower Child Development and Rehabilitation Center Sunday afternoon.

Addressing the group was William Brown, who has been active for many years in therapy fund-raising drives and related projects. Among those present Sunday was Don Cox, Jefferson City, director of special education for the State Department of Education.

Most of those present also toured the facility during the open house from noon till 3 p.m.

Garlich Monday reported $8,000 has been collected thus far in the center's annual fund-raising campaign conducted this past weekend. This figure, he said, is "about $1,000 behind where we were at the same time last year."

He expressed optimism, however, noting that this figure is being continually updated as collections come in. In conjunction with the weekend bond-selling effort, a special bowling day will be held Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, at Broadway Lanes. All the proceeds from bowling that day will go toward the center.

Ethiopian forces are placed on full alert

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia's military rulers put the country's armed forces and police on full alert today after the execution of 60 aristocrats and former officials. There was no unusual deployment of troops on the streets of Addis Ababa, however.

Those executed included members of the deposed royal family and the general who led the overthrow of former Emperor Haile Selassie. Residents of the capital expressed shock at the speed and extent of the violent removal of so many prominent people, but there was no evidence of unrest.

Radio Ethiopia announced the executions early Sunday, then resumed normal programing. By nightfall, there were only a few pedestrians and motorists on the streets of the capital.

The executions, at midnight Saturday, were ordered by the 120-member military council, now headed by 36-year-old Maj. Mengistu Haile Miriam, a little-known officer.

The council called the executions "an act of justice" against persons who had sought to disrupt the country's popular movement, abuse authority or enrich themselves while this East African nation of 27 million was racked by famine and poverty.

The executed included Gen. Aman M. Andom, chairman of the council since it took over from the 82-year-old emperor two months ago. There was no word on the fate of Selassie himself.

Selassie's son, Crown Prince Asfa Wossen, 58, designated by the military leaders as a future ceremonial king of Ethiopia, refused comment. He has lived in Geneva since suffering a stroke last year.

Aman was relieved of his post just hours before he was shot. A moderate who frequently clashed with council radicals over the pace and scope of reforms, Aman was accused of acting dictatorially and trying to sow discord between the armed forces and the council.

Machine-gun fire was heard near Aman's home as the radio announced his dismissal.

Other victims included two members of the military council; two former prime ministers, Aklilou Habte Wold and Endalkachew Makonnen; most of the cabinet ministers in Aklilou's administration; 18 generals; and a former navy commander, Rear Adm. Alexander Desta, who was the emperor's grandson.

Radio Ethiopia said the executed men had been buried. Relatives and friends were told not to ask for their remains but paid traditional house calls on grieving families.

Interest, welfare debates scheduled

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The first floor debate was scheduled today in both houses on the major items of the special legislative session— the interest rate on loans in the Senate and welfare appropriations in the House.

While plenty of debate was expected on the appropriations, the focus here was on the loan interest, which appeared to be turning into another point of controversy between the state Senate and the governor's office.

Facing the House as it convened this afternoon were three committee-approved appropriations bills—$24.6 million for payments for the rest of the fiscal year to the aged, blind and disabled, $282,000 to fund the new campaign reporting law, and $369,000 to pay for the special session.

Last week, Senate Banking Committee Chairman Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, told about 200 persons at a hearing that the committee members had talked to other legislators and had concluded that a raise in the interest from 8 to 10 per cent was the only bill that could be passed.

More than a dozen witnesses told how in the savings and loan, construction and real estate businesses money is being loaned outside the state because higher interest can be obtained, about how home sales have fallen off, and how construction unemployment is three times the state average.

Most of those testifying wanted no ceiling at all on the interest rate, the position favored by the governor.

But the governor wants some sort of restriction on the amount of points that can be charged. One point is 1 per cent of the loan.

Up to 15 points are being charged against the home seller when a loan is negotiated, and the seller compensates by adding the point costs onto the price of the house.

Only three witnesses—Consumer Affairs Director Alfred Sikes, one representing a construction trades union and the other saying he was speaking out for holders of savings deposits, said points ought to be abolished.

After the hearing, the Banking Committee approved, 4-0, the bill Spradling outlined at the outset.

Voting for it were Spradling, Richard Webster, R-Carthage, William Cason, D-Clinton, and Mary Gant, D-Kansas City. Three members were absent. Mrs. Gant abstained but changed her vote to affirmative when told four votes were needed to get the bill to the floor.

Many legislators don't see the need of raising the interest ceiling beyond 10 per cent, the same as surrounding states.

Amendments supporting the governor's position are expected to be fired at the committee bill in the Senate, in the House Banking Committee and in the House.

Spradling's original bill was almost identical to the governor's proposal, drafted by Sikes.

But Spradling's bill, as does the Senate committee substitute, hikes the $500 ceiling on the small loan interest rate.

Now, loans under $500 can be bought for 26.6 per cent interest a year. Anything over $500 costs 8 per cent.

Spradling wants to make the interest 15 per cent a year for loans between $500 and $2,500. This would help consumer finance people, who say they could make many loans over $500 but can't make any profit because it costs 8 per cent or more to get the money to loan out.

Sikes prefers to allow the residential loans go toward mobile homes. Webster pointed out that mobile home loans are covered in the laws on motor vehicles, which are not being considered in the special session.

An amendment to have savings and loan companies make a certain percentage of their loans in the areas in which they are located is expected.

Also mentioned has been a proposal for a commission with subpoena power to investigate charges of red-lining, or refusal to make loans in certain areas.

Prison inmate beaten to death

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—A Missouri Penitentiary inmate was found beaten to death this morning, apparently with a hammer, Warden Donald Wyrick said.

Found dead in his cell in the honor hall was Finis Sylvester Rankin, 27, who was serving a life sentence for second-degree murder. Rankin entered the prison in 1971 from Jackson County.

Wyrick said two suspects were under guard and were to be questioned.

The hammer and a knife were found in the cell. Rankin died from blows to the head, Wyrick said. It was the fourth murder at the prison this year, compared with five last year.

Greyhounds running again

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Greyhound buses idled by a one-week nationwide strike were back on the road again today after tentative agreement on a new contract which a union official said provides a 16 per cent increase in wages and benefits over three years.

"It's approximately a 6 per cent increase over the board, including pension benefits and everything else, retroactive to Nov. 1," said William H. Brummitt, president and business agent for Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1233 here.

The tentative agreement, reached Sunday, also provides an over-all raise of 5 per cent in 1975 and again in 1976, he said.

Some 16,000 drivers and related employes, who walked out Nov. 18, began reporting to work within hours of the accord. Ratification votes by 31 union locals across the country were expected to be completed in about three weeks.

The strike had shut down regularly scheduled routes for the bus company, which serves an average 190,000 passengers each day.

Buses first began moving again in Buffalo, N.Y., Greyhound officials said. A check of terminals here and in other parts of the country revealed that some of the first runs were made without passengers.

All scheduled coaches were to be back in operation today, company officials said.

Drivers had been paid about $5.35 an hour or 21.8 cents a mile, whichever was greater, under a contract which expired Oct. 31, Brummitt said. An earlier reported figure of $5.76 an hour was in error, he added.

Hourly wages for drivers would increase by 11 cents the first year and 10 cents each of the following two years, he said. However, Brummitt explained that most drivers are paid by the mile and would be affected more by a first-year raise of 5.5 mils (a little over one-half cent) provided by the tentative pact.

The agreement also calls for mileage raises of 4 mils the second year and 3 mils the third, he said.

The largest hourly raise, 35 cents this year, 30 cents next year and 26 cents in 1976, would go to mechanics who "have been underpaid as skilled laborers," said Brummitt.

Mechanics reportedly had been paid slightly less than bus drivers under the old contract, while the pay for some baggage department employes was around $5 an hour.

"We're never really satisfied with a contract, but I don't expect any major problems getting ratification," said Ellis B. Franklin, chairman of the union council.

Sedalia man found dead in his home

Maurice C. Choulett, 72, 1323 East Seventh, was found dead in his home by Sedalia police Monday about 9:45 a.m. after the man's neighbors reported to police that he had not been seen for a week.

Choulett was pronounced dead at the scene by Pettis County coroner Dr. John Owens. Dr. Owens ruled the man had died of an apparent heart attack on Sunday. The body was taken to the Ewing Funeral Home.

He was born in Pettis County, July 5, 1902, son of the late Hysent and Clara Grubel Choulett.

Until his retirement he had been employed as a foreman at Swift and Company.

He is survived by a number of nieces and nephews, including Mrs. Clara Brown, 1620 South Sneed.

Funeral services will be held at the Ewing Funeral Home at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday with the Rev. Robert Magee, pastor of the First Christian Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Memorial Park Cemetery.

Jury trial is set on robbery charge

Linda Hays, 17, 517 East Fourth, will be given a jury trial on Feb. 4 and 5 on the charge of first degree robbery.

Miss Hays was arraigned in Pettis County Circuit Court Monday morning.

She was freed after posting a $5,000 bond Friday.

She is charged with the Nov. 8 robbery of the Taystee Baking Co., 731 West Main, of $92 at knifepoint.

Opening tobacco prices set record

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Burley tobacco sales in the eight-state belt opened today with record price averages of up to $1.08 per pound.

Lexington, the world's largest burley market and pacesetter for the belt, had medium to heavy volume on its sales floors where even no grade, wet and unsound tobacco was bringing bids of $100.

Proposed UMW contract contains new concessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers negotiators, with some help from the Ford administration, have won further concessions from the coal industry in a proposed new three-year contract.

UMW President Arnold Miller must now sell the new package to his 38-member bargaining council, which balked at an earlier proposal. The council must approve any agreement before it can be submitted to the union's 120,000 members, who went on strike Nov. 12.

Union and industry officials declined to discuss details of the new package hammered out Sunday night. A union spokesman said its contents would not be released until after the bargaining council meets, on Tuesday at the earliest.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, who played a role in negotiating the new proposal, called it "an improved package."

The original proposal announced Nov. 13 contained wage and benefit increases of about 50 per cent over the three-year period. But council members told Miller to reopen negotiations and seek major changes, including wage increases higher than the 9 per cent proposed for the first year.

In a joint statement Sunday night, Miller and chief industry negotiator Guy Farmer said both sides had "agreed in principle on improvements in the tentative contract package.

"We intend to devote Monday to the task of finalizing contract language so that a complete and final document can be presented for the ratification process without delay," the statement said.

Miller issued a separate statement praising chief federal negotiator W.J. Usery Jr. "His even-handed treatment of both parties bridged the difficult gap between us at the crucial time," Miller said.

Usery and Simon intervened Sunday after noting that the mine workers and the industry had been unable to resolve their differences themselves.

The steel and railroad industries already have announced more than 20,000 layoffs because of the strike which enters its third week Tuesday. Government economists say a four-week strike could idle as many as 400,000 persons.

The strike seems assured of lasting well into December. Even if the tentative agreement is approved by the bargaining council on Tuesday, union officials say it will still take eight to 10 days to get it ratified by the rank-and-file.

We can still give Thanks

All of us spend too much time complaining . . . and finding faults . . . and wishing for better things.

This Thanksgiving, let's remember all that we have to be grateful for.

Our families. Our friends. The little things that happen every day.

And the simple gift of life itself.

That's a lot to be thankful for.

Proves the point

The Rev. David Finestead holds his three-year-old daughter, Kathie, after Sunday morning services at the Lake Lotawana United Methodist Church, Kansas City. Last September the minister put $1,000 of his own money in the collection plates that were passed among the congregation, telling them to take what they wanted and to use the money in work for the Lord. This Sunday's collection amounted to $3,160 to prove the Biblical Parable of the Talents in which a rich man gave money to three servants.

Minister's faith in congregation affirmed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A young Methodist minister who bet $1,000 of his own money on his faith in people and the Parable of the Talents, has won going away.

The 30-year-old Rev. David Finestead, a one-time farm implement dealer at Granger, Iowa, put $1,000 in the collection plate Sept. 15 and passed it among the congregation of his Lake Lotawana United Methodist Church—just three months after he arrived there.

He urged the congregation to take the money, put it to best use where their talents lie, and return with the proceeds. They did—filing past an altar Sunday decorated with a Thanksgiving theme to leave $3,160. Some more is expected to trickle in in the days ahead.

The Rev. Mr. Finestead's experiment in human nature was based on the Biblical Parable of the Talents, in which a rich man gave three servants money. Two invested the money and gave back more than they had been given. The third was afraid to risk it and buried it for safekeeping. When he gave back only the one talent he had been given, the master was displeased.

There were 122 in attendance Sept. 15 when he pulled his surprise; 161 on hand Sunday. Membership is 155. He told the packed service the Parable of the Talents applies not only to money, but to what one does with the talents given him by God.

"We are given an amount of grace by Christ," he said. "We must ask ourselves what we are going to do with that grace. Will we ignore it, or put it to use for the glory of God?"

Following the service, the conversation centered around what the young minister had started.

Mrs. Tom Willis said the church had been "kind of drifting along" before the Rev. Mr. Finestead came.

"We needed something like this," she said. "This has really brought the people together."

Her husband took $120 from the plate, bought supplies for his printing business, and returned Sunday with the proceeds of all wedding invitation work the past two months—$605.01.

Their son took $10 to buy a music stand so he could give guitar lessons. He returned $40.

May Borchardt, 67, recalls taking only $1 because she had no idea what she could do. She went to an orchard, bought applies and made jelly which other members helped her sell throughout the community. One member bought 66 jars to give as Christmas gifts.

Attorney Howard Chamberlin took $20 for some things he needed for a civil trial. He and his wife, Carol, agreed they would return more than the $20 regardless of the outcome of the trial. Chamberlin won, and they returned $100.

"It's so different from just writing out a check to the church for $5 or so and not knowing that much about where it came from or where it's going," Chamberlin said.

"Maybe I'm just not smart enough to worry," he said. "But I believe if you put your faith in people, they'll usually come through."

Asked if he would do it again, or come up with some other surprise for his congregation, he replied:

"We'll just let the Lord lead the way and see what happens."

Hughesville teenagers to aid CBC

(Democrat-Capital Service)

HUGHESVILLE — Twelve teenagers from the Hughesville area have organized a youth group to assist the Hughesville Community Betterment Club.

In an inaugural meeting last week, the group elected officers. They are Jimmie Bremer, chairman; Debbie Bean, vice chairman; Donna Lunsford, treasurer; Cathy Bremer, secretary; and Rick Lewis, publicity chairman.

Mrs. Frankie Phillips and Mrs. Anita Smith are the club's advisors.

A club spokesman said the group's first project will be to work with the Hughesville Community Betterment Club to sponsor a float at the Dec. 7 Christmas parade here.

All club members, with the exception of Bremer, are students at Northwest High School. Bremer is a graduate of the school.

The organization plans to meet on the third Thursday of each month.

The oldest indoor theater in the world is the Teatro Olimpico in Vicenza, Italy. Designed in the Roman style by Andrea di Pietro, it was begun three months before his death and finished in 1582 by his pupil Vicenzo Scamozzi.

Many problems cause fatigue

Dear Dr. Lamb — In one of your columns you said that low thyroid is a metabolic disease, but there were many causes of fatigue. At times I have a burst of energy, but it doesn't last very long and usually after supper I tend to be quite tired. I do have an underactive thyroid and my blood pressure is low. I was taking some type of thyroid pills, but they didn't seem to help me at all. As a result of my thyroid condition I am overweight.

Dear Reader — Let's eliminate the problem of physical fatigue from heavy physical work. The cause of other types of fatigue is often situational. It may be a symptom of just plain boredom. In other instances it reflects unhappiness with life situations, at home, with the family, or on the job. A common problem with many people is lack of a truly significant goal that stimulates the person and brings out his or her best qualities.

Emotional fatigue in the evening often is related to problems within the marriage. It may be a woman's reaction to spending the night with her husband. Some men, too, use the mechanism for similar reasons.

Beyond that you need to look to the many medical problems that interfere with the release of energy from your food within your cells. High on this list is anemia. You need oxygen in the cells to release food energy. Anemia limits the ability of the blood to carry oxygen to the cells.

Nutritional factors are equally important. If you don't have enough of the right foods and the necessary vitamins needed to process the food and release energy, you will lack energy or feel tired. Anyone who has overdone the dieting kick knows what I'm speaking about.

Circulatory disease, including heart trouble, can cause fatigue. It is similar to anemia, in that poor circulation makes it possible to provide adequate amounts of oxygen and nutrients to the cells. You have to be able to transport all the food and oxygen elements to the cells before the energy release can occur.

Infectious illnesses sap energy by using it to fight the infection or repair and replace damaged structures and vital complex chamicals in the body.

A common cause for fatigue is insufficient physical activity. This can happen to a housewife. The housekeeping chores, while time consuming, may not provide the range of needed physical activity. The office worker sitting at a desk all day may become physically deconditioned. This has far-reaching effects on energy. A good regular physical exercise program will help with this problem.

Metabolic diseases can cause fatigue, this includes low thyroid problems, disease of the adrenal gland, diabetes and other problems. Taking thyroid will not relieve fatigue unless there really is a low thyroid problem. If you are bored with your marriage thyroid won't help. It won't help you lose weight, either, unless you are really low on thyroid.

Photographer produces final book about Picasso

Photographer's tribute

Photographer David Douglas Duncan, shown recently in New York City, has painstakingly produced a book, titled "Goodbye Picasso," in tribute to his longtime friend. The book is about the personal and professional ife of the artist, whom Duncan called "the best painter of this century ... and the dearest guy." Duncan's own work, including periods as Life Magazine and war photographer, has often involved him in action far removed from the world of art.

(AP)

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — David Douglas Duncan, like some Phoenician merchantman, plies his trade between ports of violence and pleasure, war and art.

His photographs have won him fame from the Korean war to the art treasures of the Kremlin, from the siege at Khe Sanh to the Villa La Californie of Pablo Picasso in the south of France.

He is an itinerant between extremes. He was born in Kansas City, Mo., but lives in France, in the soft breath of the Mediterranean amid olive groves. He is a retired World War II Marine officer who speaks in a voice sometimes too soft to be heard. He says he would like to get back into action photographing the news again "because there is so much going on." Yet he contemplates as his next work a photo book about a very special dachshund, named Lumpe, his pet and for a time Picasso's.

Which is why, when he sits in his tasteful room in New York's Plaza Hotel and savors his tenth book as though it were human, there is a certain stark black and white quality to the story he tells of the first picture he ever took, the first camera he owned.

The first camera? "My youngest sister, Jeanie, gave it to me on my 18th birthday. I was at the University of Arizona and she sent me a 39-cent Bakelite camera called a Univex."

The morning after it came in the mail he tuned in the radio in his college room and heard the news that the Congress Hotel in downtown Tucson was afire. He got as far as the sidewalk before he remembered the camera.

"I thought, my God, a fire and the camera. I didn't even know how to load it. I loaded it while I was running."

The hotel was billowing smoke when he got there and he worked his way to a smokeless side.

"And I saw from the firelines a guy who was much older, middle-aged, rather slight, half-dressed, arguing with a fireman, trying to go back inside, saying, 'Look, my room's not burning yet. I was startled by the fire and I want to go back for my baggage.'

"And finally the fireman said, 'Okay fella, I'll go get it.'"

★ ★ ★

Duncan snapped the fireman arguing with the man, going back in and returning, coughing and sputtering. He promptly forgot the incident and looked for other pictures. The film was still in the camera the next day when he read the headlines, "Dillinger Captured At Crown Hotel Fire."

He read about how a fireman had dared the smoke to retrieve a guest's luggage, had stumbled on the way out. The suitcase broke open, spilling guns and money on the stairs. And the film was still in the camera.

The Tucson paper printed his photos, desperado John Dillinger, his image captured by a 39-cent camera. Duncan's only regret: he never got the film back.

In college he studied first to be an archaelogist at Arizona, then a marine zoologist at the University of Miami. But those were depression days and there was no market for either. He begged the American Museum of Natural History for a job. No luck. So he turned to free-lance photography. Then through a family friend, he met Michael Lerner of the Lerner Shops fortune. Lerner, an avid sports fisherman, invited young Duncan to be the photographer on an expedition for the American Museum to the Humboldt Current off South America, an expedition that finally yielded the Museum's Hall of Fishes.

His advice for good pictures to the layman: "There's nothing to it. One thing, remember, the way they make cameras now with automatic exposure meters they're going to give you exposure, so remember one thing and you cannot fail. Just move in close. If something interests you, just move in close and fire. You're going to get it. Whether you're in Afghanistan, or Tucson, or it's Dillinger, you're going to get it. It's almost foolproof."

Today, at 58, Duncan's professional treasures are his capital investment: four Leicas custom built for him about 1954. He uses them for compact, fast-action situations, and says that in combat he wears two of them "crossed, bandolier-style across my chest, one with a normal telephoto lens, one with a wide angle."

His work as a Life Magazine and war photographer notwithstanding, almost all of his life since 1956 has in some way been tied to Picasso, whose work revolutionzed 20th Century art.

There have been three books: "The Private World of Pablo Picasso," "Picasso's Picassos" and the latest, "Goodbye Picasso."

Duncan has never painted himself. "I've always said I've a friend who is the best painter of this century, the most provocative, the most revolutionary, and the dearest guy."

Picasso is dead. Duncan says he thought that the old man would live forever. But now, after his death in 1973, he has painstakingly produced a $35 book of the personal and professional life of the artist, with 200 photos of Picasso and his works.

The letters and text carry an enthusiasm, almost a hero worship, born of his immediate impressions. They are, he says, "Letters of the moment" to match "photographs of the moment."

And he lingers over the cover, jute, woven in England, dyed in Bangladesh, bound in Switzerland, a rich, Brilliant, orange burlap. "Did you look at the binding on this book ... I love that material. It's like feeling Picasso's coat. He would have liked it."

Remains of author will be reburied

VIENNA (AP) —The remains of Austrian writer Franz Werfel will be reburied in Central Cemetery here. Werfel died in Los Angeles in 1945, a refugee after the annexation of his country by Germany in 1938.

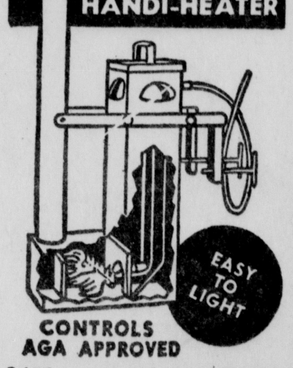

He will be honored in ceremonies all over the city. Similar homage was paid in June to composer Arnold Schoenberg, another famous Viennese who died in exile in Los Angeles.

Werfel is well known here for many novels, including "Song of Bernadette," which was made into a movie, and for plays including "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," which was made into an opera.

Werfel was born in Prague when that city was part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Corn and milo harvested from immature plants killed by frost can be a good buy for livestock feed. Immature grain has a light bushel weight, but it has a much higher feed value in a pound of dry matter than most people think.

A two-year study with "soft" corn at the University of Minnesota showed that corn killed by frost when the grain was in the milk stage made good livestock feed. Keep in mind that because of fewer pounds of dry matter the bushel value of the frost-damaged grain will be much less than that of mature grain.

Tax institutes

Dates and locations of farm tax institutes are Sedalia, Dec. 18 and 19 at Ramada Inn. Urban tax institute is Dec. 13. Registration fee is $10.

Evergreen wrapping

During the winter water loss through the leaves of evergreens can be reduced somewhat by wrapping the evergreens loosely with large-mesh chicken wire, according to David Lindell, area agronomy specialist. Even chicken wire holds the limbs together enough to reduce water loss. This prevents winter winds from passing freely through the evergreen branches and reduces the "sweating" process peculiar to plant life, the loss of water from plant leaves.

This practice of wrapping evergreens would refer to upright Junipers, Cedar, Pines and even the broadleaf shrub — Boxwood. This shrub is subject to winter injury and should be wrapped with burlap.

Bull sale

Sixty one bulls are consigned for the ninth area performance tested bull sale at Clinton, Tuesday, according to Ed Schwitzky, area livestock specialist. The bulls will be graded starting at 8 a.m. The grading is an opportunity to observe the merits of each animal. The sale will start at 1 p.m.

Breeds represented are 25 Polled Herefords, 28 Angus, four Charolais, one Hereford, two Polled Shorthorn and one Limousin.

The 61 bulls averaged 991 pounds at one year of age. This is 190 pounds above the average of all beef cattle.

Catalogs are available at the Extension Center.

Stored grain

It is that time of year when we need to be thinking about and doing periodic checking on the grain we have in storage.

When grain is put in the bin in the fall the grain temperature is warm to perhaps slightly hot. As outside temperature drops, cool air on the surface of the grain moves down the sides to the bottom of the bin and then up thru the center. This cool air coming in contact with warm grain picks up moisture, then as this air reaches the surface the moisture condenses on the grain. As outside temperature warms, either several consecutive warm days during the winter or as spring approaches, conditions for mold, warm temperature and high moisture, are present. In a few days to a week the top of the grain will crust.

When grain is harvested late while temperature is low the air movement is just the opposite. Outside temperatures warming up spilage forms in bottom of bin.

To avoid spoilage and grain going out of condition, we need to have bins equipped with aeration equipment. This aeration should start when air temperature is less than grain temperature. Don't cool below 40 degrees as spoilage may occur at the bottom of the bin as a result of moisture accumulation at that point.

As weather warms in spring, grain needs to again be warmed up to within 10 to 15 degrees of outside temperature, but not in excess of 60 degrees of summer storage.

A few instruments, thermometer on a rod and perhaps a grain probe, good management, along with records of dates and temperature readings, and regular checking will eliminate most of the grain spoilage problems.

Five die in auto accidents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic accidents resulted in five deaths over the weekend in Missouri.

The victims:

Fred Lee Reed, 40, Steele, Mo.; Charles Pendleton, 56, Lee's Summit, Mo.; Janet Prag, 30, Lemay, Mo.; Douglas Bacon, 9, Sedalia, and Edgar Brown, 36, Kankakee, Ill.

Reed and Pendleton died in accidents Sunday near Steele and in Kansas City.

The highway patrol said Reed was in a car that crashed into a payloader that was pushing a disabled truck on U. S. 61.

A car driven by Pendleton plummeted more than 50 feet from Blue River Road in Kansas City onto the bank of the Blue River. The body was found pinned under the auto early Sunday by a son-in-law who had been searching for Pendleton.

Mrs. Prag was killed when her car and a vehicle driven by an escaped convict collided in south St. Louis. Ray Milentz, 31, the escapee, who was being pursued by police was seriously injured and Mrs. Prag's husband, John, also 30, was in critical condition.

The Bacon youth was killed on a county road near Sedalia when his father's pickup truck went off a curve.

Brown's tractor-trailer rig ran off Interstate 44 about 70 miles southwest of St. Louis and smashed into an embankment. The patrol said a tire apparently blew out on the rig.

Mrs. Chester Wissman, Route 1, and Mrs. John Sneed, Route 5, have been named board members of the Missouri Shorthorn Lassies, it was announced this week. Mrs. Billy Adams, Warrensburg, was named president of the group.

The elections were held during a meeting at the Old Missouri Homestead. The Shorthorn Lassies group is affiliated with the American Shorthorn Association, headquartered in Omaha, Neb.

Escapee is charged with murder

ST. LOUIS (AP)— Raymond C. Milentz, 32, an escaped Missouri State Penitentiary inmate, has been charged with second-degree murder in connection with the death Saturday morning of a 30-year-old St. Louis woman, police said.

Milentz was charged following a spectacular auto crash in which a car he was driving struck a car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Prag during a high-speed police chase. Janet Prag was killed and her husband was seriously injured.

Police had been seeking Milentz and another prisoner, Henry Blake, 40, since the two walked away from a drug rehabilitation conference at City Hall on Thursday.

St. Louis County police said they began chasing Milentz after they received a tip that the escapee would visit a south-county home.

Milentz was serving a five-year sentence for assaulting a police officer and Blake was serving a nine-year term for armed robbery.

Blake was still at large early today.

Loan delinquencies watched closely

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While families have shown recently a tendency to resist purchases of big ticket items and to reduce their debts, many of them still have a heavy burden of bills as the economy drifts into recession.

Most financial analysts still maintain there is no great danger in the big bills owed by households, but there isn't one of them who isn't watching closely the statistics on loan delinquencies.

Fear does exist among some bankers, for example, about the ability of the most overburdened families to pay their creditors, especially as the jobless figures rise and overtime is eliminated.

In the fiscal year that ended June 30, there were 168,787 personal bankruptcy cases. Indications are that in the present fiscal year the rate is higher, probably near 1967's record of 191,729.

A check of court records in various large cities by Business Week magazine, showed more cases filed in the first 10 months of this calendar year than in all of last year.

The Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. notes in the current issue of its "Survey" that the amount of consumer debt, including mortgage loans, increased by 42 per cent between the end of 1970 and the middle of 1974.

While that figure seems large in itself, the significance is that after-tax personal income in the same period rose by only 37 per cent. It commented: "A bigger share than in the past of people's incomes is already committed just to make payments on past purchases."

Much of the American public, it appears, not only attempted to raise their style of living in spite of inflation but, when frustrated in doing so, took out loans to pay the bills.

Now, when repayment ability is weak, these bills are coming due.

Morgan observes that delinquency rates for both installment loans and mortgage loans have risen over the past year.

In mid-1974 about 2.63 per cent of installment loans — the kind that are repaid in weekly or monthly installments — were listed as delinquent, or 30 or more days behind in payments. That rate compares, with 2 per cent a year earlier and is the highest since 1950.

The delinquency rate among mortgage loans at midyear was 4 per cent, up from 3.8 per cent a year earlier and from a rate of 3 per cent in the mid-1960s. Foreclosures, according to Morgan, are running around 136,000 a year.

In all, American households now owe $577.3 billion, or had owed that much at midyear. This compares with only $23.4 billion in 1945 and $406.1 billion as recently as 1970.

The rise in debt formation now seems to be slowing for both business and individuals, but with combined inflation-recession eroding the ability to repay.

The Berkshire is one of the oldest of the improved breeds of swine. It was originated and developed in the Shire of Berks, England, and is still raised extensively in that country. Many animals of this breed have been imported into the United States and Canada from England. Mention is made of Berkshire hogs in England and Scotland as early as 1789.

A mature Berkshire hog is of medium size, generally smooth, and of suitable length and depth to produce a carcass of good quality. Its legs are of medium length and have good bone. The Berkshire is a solid hog and usually is free from surplus outside fat. Its meatiness is evident from the outside.

Berkshire hogs are black and have white points on their feet; they usually have a splash of white on their face. The distinctive characteristic is the head; the face is slightly dished and broad between the eyes, the ears are erect. The snout is of medium length. Extreme pug heads are undesirable.

Missouri Democrats hold victory dinner

By JIM CHURCH
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democrats held a big party here last weekend, heard U. S. Sen.-elect John Glenn of Ohio discuss inflation and energy and vowed to fill every hotel and motel in Jefferson City in 1976 with similar victory parties.

They also blamed the Republican administration in Washington for inflation and warned that Democrats cannot rest on their laurels in 1976.

The $25-a-plate dinner—about 100 couples paid $100—attracted about 800 persons.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, a landslide re-election winner, told the audience, "You should be at the head table. You, the workers, should get the credit."

"1976 will be the big victory dinner," Eagleton said. He said he hoped to see Democrats sweep every race in the state and fill all the capital city motels and hotels with victory dinners.

George Lehr, state auditor-elect, made a few remarks and revealed that former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who attended the dinner, donated all the proceeds of Hearnes' birthday dinner last July to Lehr's race.

Sen. Stuart Symington and Glenn warned that the growing number of independent voters threatens the Democrats' chances of recapturing the White House and holding a majority in Congress.

Symington said the Democratic Party needs more men like Glenn, who "will take that step into the unknown rather than waiting to see what's going to happen."

He referred to Glenn being the first American to orbit the earth.

Symington said Eagleton was becoming "one of the giants of the U. S. Senate" and predicted Missourians would return Eagleton to Washington "as long as he wants to go."

The Democratic legislative leaders, House Speaker Richard Rabbitt and Senate President Pro Tem William Cason, said Democrats were the sponsors of most of the best legislation in the last two years.

Yellow buttons with a smiling face and Cason's name on them were passed out. "Cason Country" signs were stuck on walls throughout the Ramada Inn.

Cason is on the verge of publicly announcing for the 1976 governor's race, but is waiting to see what kind of support he can get for the 1976 primary, as well as find out who his opponents might be.

Rabbitt has said he might run for lieutenant governor in 1976.

Glenn told the audience that food and fuel would guide foreign policy in the next few years.

He said if the President does not exercise leadership in dealing with the new "geopolitical" powers—the Mideast countries—and in energy production and conservation, then Congress should.

Congress should assume leadership in dealing with inflation, which is compounded by the food and fuel issues, Glenn said. He noted the U. S. dollar now can buy no more than what 75 cents could in 1969.

"Not too many people are going to keep up with that kind of inflation," he said, and gave credit to past Democratic administrations for "progress of collective concern" such as public works projects in the 1930s and public health and anti-poverty projects in the 1960s.

Energy problems, plus inflation, already are threatening major industries, Glenn said.

"It's tragic that nearly a year has passed since the energy crisis became apparent and only two minor bills have passed to alleviate the situation," Glenn said. "Shunting aside the problem because gasoline lines are shorter is a dangerous course of inaction."

He also suggested expanding the voluntary $1 tax contribution to political parties by allowing a person to give $20 "off the bottom line." In other words, a person's amount of taxes owed would be deducted by $20 and it would go to the party of his choice.

Discrimination by upper caste Hindus continues

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

DEOLI VILLAGE, India (AP) — In all his 70 years, Dharma Anand has never entered the homes at the other end of his village.

"No, not inside," he said. "I may go along the road, but not inside the houses."

Anand is an untouchable, the lowest rung on a strict Hindu ladder. The homes down the road belong to upper caste Hindus, his religious, social and economic betters.

Their closed doors illustrate inherited prejudice still poisoning human relations across India a quarter-century after untouchability was abolished by the Indian constitution.

Despite thousands of pious words from government officials and a set of special laws, the 80 million untouchables continue to suffer the vicious discrimination assigned them by ancient Hindu laws.

"It is 27 years since India became free, and it has not changed," said Kishuri Lal, who runs a school for untouchable children in New Delhi.

"Outside there is a show, but inside things have not changed much. Old people are unable to get out of the rut. It is for the young to build a new order."

Upper caste Hindus often enforce their centuries-old domination with violence. Indian newspapers carry frequent reports of beatings, rapes and group attacks against untouchables.

The lowest rung

Some of India's 80 million untouchables sit and stroll by the mud huts next to railway lines where they live in New Delhi. Untouchability, caste discrimination sanctified by ancient Hindu laws against those on society's lowest rung, was officially abolished by the Indian constitution a quarter of a century ago. But the hereditary practice is still poisoning human relations across the country. (AP)

A private opinion poll this spring found that one in seven villages surveyed had experienced group violence by dominant castes against untouchables.

In one documented case in Gujarat state, two untouchables were killed with spears and staffs by a mob of caste Hindus enraged because untouchables had drawn water from an upper caste well when their own went dry.

Several members of parliament complained recently that such attacks are increasing, particularly in backwater villages where local administration is weak.

The trend was driven home to Nafe Singh Tanwar 28 years ago when he first entered a classroom with upper caste children in this village 15 miles from New Delhi.

Because he took a drink of water, the teacher caned him on the hands and buttocks. Then, to make the lesson clear, the teacher smashed the earthenware water jug to make sure upper caste children would not drink from a vessel defiled by the lips of an 8-year-old untouchable.

It is perhaps a gauge of progress that Tanwar, a 35-year-old electrician, now regularly enters the homes of upper caste Hindus — to fix broken lamps.

★ ★ ★

Tanwar's job makes him a local success story and he heads the untouchable association of Deoli Village. He believes his generation can force better relations with high castes and looks forward to an easier life for his five-year-old son.

"We are all united now," he told a recent visitor. "If anything happens, we can put up a fight. The law is with us."

The basic law is Article 17 of the Indian Constitution, which abolished untouchability for India. A 1955 law makes discrimination against untouchables a crime.

The caste system stems from sacred Hindu scriptures dividing society into Brahmins for priestly and educational work, warriors for defense, merchants for commerce, and peasants for agriculture.

Below all four categories came noncaste common laborers — untouchables for dirty work. Their jobs included removing carcasses of dead animals and emptying chamber pots that were for years the only plumbing — and still are in some backward towns.

Noncaste workers assigned these repugnant jobs became, sometimes literally, untouchable. Caste Hindus traditionally barred them from drawing water at village wells, visiting temples or even passing too closely.

In villages where 80 per cent of India's 580 million inhabitants live, tradition goes on unperturbed by the 20th Century, despite sme progress in big cities.

The untouchables sweep streets, scrub others' homes, plow others' fields, tend cattle and collect trash. Many live in segregated pickets and get water only from their own wells.

A delegation of untouchable peasants marched on government headquarters in Gujarat on Indian Independence Day Aug. 15 to complain that dairy cooperatives refused to market their milk because it was considered unclean.

"Even if we go to court, the laws may say one thing, but the policeman and judges are caste Hindus," said Tanwar. "Naturally they will decide in favor of their fellow caste Hindus.

"They can go," he said of aggrieved untouchables, "but they know they have to live together. So they do not go."

Hearings set on shooting death

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP) — Preliminary hearings are set Dec. 6 for a trio charged in the shooting death of James Stemmons, Carthage liquor store operator.

Stemmons, reported missing Thursday night after customers found the store unattended, was found dead Friday beside his pickup truck in a field four miles south of here. He had been shot a number of times.

Being held in the Jasper County Jail in lieu of bonds totaling $200,000 each were Leslie Sanders, 21, John Martin, 19, and David Pugh, 20, all of the Carthage area. Each is charged with first-degree murder, armed robbery and kidnaping.

Following their arrest Friday night, a spokesman for the TriState Major Case Squad said several hundred dollars and four guns taken from the liquor store were recovered.

Animal lover has ranch of rare specimens

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

STRAFFORD, Mo. (AP) — From the time Pat Jones was a kid on his parents' cotton farm in England, Ark., he's been bringing home animals.

Forty years ago it was a stray dog, a bird with a broken wing, an alley cat.

Today it's a rare Pere David deer (extinct in their native China since 1921), Tibetan yaks, gnus, Watusi (African) or Bactrian cattle.

And "home" today is the sprawling 7,400-acre Buena Vista Ranch near this community 10 miles east of Springfield.

Jones, who made a name for himself in the Missouri insurance industry by building one of the state's most successful home-owned insurance companies, is realizing a life-long dream with his Buena Vista Exotic Animal Paradise. It's an outgrowth of the spread he started in 1961 when he purchased 320 acres of Ozark hills to build the ranch he's always wanted.

Jones' ranch grew to 7,400 acres and became a showcase in the '60s, first as a breeding place for fine horses, then for expensive cattle. Next came buffalo, then deer, followed by Big Horn sheep.

By 1969, Jones decided he owed it to himself and his wife, Arminta, to retire. Despite the glorious trappings of the Jones ranch their earlier life had been a rigorous one. They met in high school and migrated to Los Angeles. He worked in an aircraft factory and they ran a gardenia nursery. The two jobs meant many 20-hour work days.

★ ★ ★

After World War II, the Joneses headed back for Little Rock where he parlayed experience at a fruit-stand into ownership of three supermarkets and three drive-ins.

He then moved to Springfield, where he started Modern Security Life Insurance Co. in 1960. The Joneses sold the company in 1969 and spent a year traveling about the country.

But retirement was not Pat Jones' bag.

During a trip to Texas he had visited a drive-through animal preserve. What better vocation, he thought, for a man with 7,400 acres of Ozark hills and a love for animals.

He decided to make the move in March of 1971, hopped on his bulldozer and carved out a 9½-mile course up and down the hills and around the lakes of a wooded 400-acre portion of the ranch he'd never visited before. That was the trail that would be covered by more than 2 million visitors in the next 3½ years.

It was back to the 16-hour workdays he'd known most of his life. He personally supervised every construction detail while searching the United States and abroad for inhabitants to join the 500 animals already on his ranch.

Four months and six days after that first bulldozer trip, the park was opened to the public.

The response was above expectations. In 1972, there were 380,000 visitors to the park. Last year it was 700,000 and this year he expects to surpass a million. June's attendance was 38 per cent ahead of the same month in 1973. Fifty employes keep the park open year-round, except for times when snow or ice make the steep roads impassable.

Despite the commercial success of his latest venture, Jones is more anxious to talk about another facet — the breeding and herd development going on at the park.

"Cross-breeding is one of the most important functions of the park," Jones said recently. "We're mixing a lot of breeds people didn't think possible — and having excellent results."

One example of the breeding program is a five-year-old half-Brahama, half-buffalo that tips the scales at two tons, and can live on wild grasses rather than expensive feed grains.

He notes the buffalo meat is somewhat sweeter than beef and the cross-breeding of cattle with buffalo holds some distinct advantages because of meat quality and the size of the cross-bred animals.

Teachers and parents can stop sexism in elementary schools

By ELAINE MOOKER
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Teachers who want to rid their young pupils of rigid ideas about sex roles should ask them to act out familiar stories with a new twist, a report on sexism in schools says.

The teacher might ask the class to act out a princess rescuing a prince, a father taking care of the children while the mother works or girls playing baseball while the boys watch, the report suggests.

The Connecticut Public Interest Research Group, a student-supported organization inspired by Ralph Nader, has issued a handbook on how teachers and parents can stop sexism in elementary schools.

Martha Cohen, author of the booklet, says "The whole elementary school system is unknowingly geared toward limiting children's opportunities. The fact that 85 per cent of the elementary principals are male is not a good example for encouraging children that jobs are open equally to everyone.

Ms. Cohen, a junior sociology major at Trinity College, says teachers must challenge rigid stereotypes that serve only to limit a child's development, to preclude gentleness in a boy or aggressiveness in a girl.

She suggests that teachers use "he" and "she" interchangeably in stories to stimulate discussion among children about characters and their sex roles.

Teachers should encourage girls to use manipulative materials such as screwdrivers and hammers and encourage boys to cook, sew and play house with girls, she says.

Ms. Cohen also suggests dividing the class into groups. One would observe "real life" and report to the class on such topics as how many girls wear slacks to school, how many mothers of class members work and how many fathers do household chores or care for children.

The other group would study television, magazines and textbooks and report on how these media view women and men.

School children would also enjoy visits from parents who work in nontraditional jobs, such as men who are nurses or women who are lawyers, she says.

Parents should examine textbooks and complain to school officials and textbook publishers about books that show girls using their mathematical prowess to measure flour for cupcakes, while boys are shown cutting book shelves or copying house plans, she adds.

Parents should also watch television programs their children see and compare the male and female characters with real people they know, according to the report.

Ms. Cohen believes the report — which gives pointers for parents and teachers, lists books and records and suggests teacher in-service training topics — is a resource to activate those changes boards of education are seeking to eliminate sex stereotyping.

She cited a recent resolution passed by the Hartford Board of Education urging that sex-stereotyped programs and textbooks be discontinued.

Out of necessity

Black woman creates line of makeup

By SANDRA GITTENS

NEW YORK (AP) — Necessity being the mother of invention turned into a success story for Barbara Walden.

Former actress, now businesswoman, Miss Walden founded Barbara Walden Cosmetics as a result of not finding a line of makeup complementary to her dark complexion.

The company, which has been in existence now for six years, began as a solution to her immediate problems. As an actress, Miss Walden was constantly at odds using makeup created for white women. Finding it would streak, cake and dull her natural color, she decided to develop a makeup that would enhance her natural skin tones.

Right from the beginning, however, she encountered problems.

"The problem came dealing with my chemist," she says. "I knew what I wanted, but I only had an idea of what I needed. So having no background in chemistry and trying to explain to my chemist what I wanted, he thought I was insane.

"When I started saying, 'I want to do a cheek blush in brick,' he'd say, 'What do you mean, brick!' I said, 'Well let me show you what I'm talking about.' I took him two bricks and rubbed them together, showing him the powder that came from them. The color is just gorgeous," she says. "But that's exactly how we arrived at getting the colors for our blushes.

"The next problem was trying to convince him to develop our foundation makeup in skin tones instead of colors."

She explained that the skin tones found in the black woman are almost never the pink ones found to be the basic color in white makeup. Rather, oranges, yellows or even some of the beiges dominate in the skin tones of black women.

"For instance," she continued, "you can put 10 black women in a room together and out of them you will find almost each one has a different undertone. You can also put 10 white women in a room and you will find almost the same undertone — pink dominates.

"No matter how fair the black woman's skin may be, you'll find very few will have a pink undertone — you'll find the oranges and yellows but rarely will you find pink. So the thing we had to do was to work with the tones in skin of black women," she said.

... the skin tones found in the black woman are almost never the pink ones found to be the basic color in white makeup.

One special thing she took into consideration while dealing with the foundation makeup was texture. Finding that most black women have oily skin, a heavy moisturizer base was used. This, she said, cuts down on streaking, caking and smearing as it allows the makeup to blend with the natural oils.

"We found that because our makeup has a lot of moisture in it, it appeals to a lot of people who have dry skin as well," she said. "Another interesting thing is that it is also selling to a lot of nonblacks."

Barbara Walden

Miss Walden says the most important thing in makeup is not its use but skin care treatment. Claiming that there is "no such thing as bad skin," she advises proper cleaning, care and diet as the essentials for healthy-looking skin.

"We even have a policy that we will not make up a young girl in the store unless she's 18 or over. Makeup ages them and makes them look harsh," she says. "I feel very strongly about this. I also believe that a young girl should start taking care of her skin and be trained to do so at the age of 10. I tell their mothers to start putting the body lotions on their child's hands so they will learn what it's all about. You'd be surprised at the number of girls who look as though they had walked on their hands and knees because their mothers had not bothered to explain this to them. So we have a lot of young people using our products — our skin care and hair care, but not the makeup."

The line of products she has on the market is limited, she says. "I wouldn't put out anything I wouldn't use myself," she adds. So two more of her inventions stem from a personal solution and have gone on to become, as she puts it, "big sellers, even with the men." She calls them "lip dark" and "lip light."

"Now," she says, "we have several lipsticks in the line and we have them because I've done a lot of research and tests on them.

"One of the really special things for me, and I didn't realize that this was so special among black women, was the lip dark."

Explaining that her bottom lip is very pink while the upper one is very dark, Miss Walden says, "naturally, whenever I wore lipstick my lips were always two different colors.

"But when I was working with my chemist who designed my makeup, he suggested we work with something with moisture in it to treat the lips. We then came up with an item that is now called lip dark, originally designed for me. It evened up the skin color so now when I wear lipstick I get the true color on both lips. Yet it wasn't until I started working in the stores that I noticed I wasn't the only one with this problem. So that's how it got introduced on the market."

Polly's pointers

Non-slip designs hard to remove

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns our staff of life. What is happening to our bread? It seems to me that modern bakers have "refined" bread beyond any semblance of what it should and used to be. I am really angry about this and find it almost impossible to believe there is any nutritional value left in it. Lately I find it is not baked to its full capacity as the slices are badly shaped and the yeast smell is so strong. I challenge the bakers to give us a less "refined" and a fully baked bread. — MRS. J.G.N., a burned-up housewife.

DEAR POLLY — I am a square dancer and starch my nylon net petticoats with one cup of Epsom salts added to a quart of water. This is perfect and might be just the answer for Joan who wants to add body to her nylon lace tablecloth.

My greetings to Mim as I am with her concerning her Pet Peeve. I have been trying to find those nice old-fashioned rough bath towels for years. — V PAT.

DEAR POLLY — and Joan who wants to add body to her nylon lace tablecloth — A friend had this problem with her nylon ruffled curtains and read that powdered milk would do it. She has been using this for some time and likes it. Little bits of the dry milk are left but they are so small they really do not show. Try different amounts of milk and water until the desired consistency is acquired. — HELEN.

DEAR POLLY — My husband thoroughly dislikes painting the exterior of our house. However, with our new plan the house has never looked nicer and he does not fuss as much about doing the painting. Only one side is painted each year and it always looks fresh and neat. — ELLIE.

DEAR POLLY — With shortening prices sky rocketing (what isn't?) I save wherever I can. When I have used the shortening in a can I save the tin. When ready to grease a pan I wad up a piece of waxed paper, rub around inside the can, grease the pan and then save the tin and paper until the next baking. No waste with shortening clinging to the tin or from paper having too much shortening on it. Here is to saving. — CAROLE.

DEAR READERS — I set such a tin on a low flame or even the pilot light on the stove, melt what shortening clings to the can and then pour this into a small can that is kept in the refrigerator just for this leftover shortening use. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — and M.H.S. — I have a couple of suggestions for those rusted refrigerator shelves. Clean the rust off well and then spray with regular refrigerator odor free paint.

Plastic lace can be purchased at so-called dime and variety stores in the desired width and length and be used to cover such shelves. This looks pretty. Select an open pattern and it will not impair the air circulation in the refrigerator. I also like using it on the shelves since it prevents small containers from tipping in the refrigerator. — MRS. L.E.

DEAR POLLY — When knitting, especially something in a pattern stitch, I always lay aside the work when in the middle of a row rather than at the end and find it much easier to pick up again without wondering where I was. This may seem like a little thing but it saves time and mistakes, too. — MRS. F. L. L.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — How can one remove rubber designs that were put in a bathtub to prevent slipping? Mine are yellow and discolored. No one seems to know the answer. — MRS. O. T.

What is behind skyrocketing divorce rate?

WASHINGTON — Sometimes the most profound statements about the quality of life in America arrive in the dullest looking packages.

Rowan

I got a Census Bureau publication the other day entitled "Marital Status and Living Arrangements: March 1974." I thumbed through it as a sort of pre-wastebasket gesture when these facts caught my eye:

There are now 63 divorced persons in this country for every 1,000 who are married and living with their spouses — an increase from 35 divorced persons per 1,000 in 1960.

Struck by this startling increase in divorce in just 14 years, I read further: 58 divorced whites for every 1,000 intact marriages, but 112 divorced blacks.

Those figures raise a lot of important questions about this society.

Why has the rate of divorce almost doubled in so short a period?

Why is the divorce rate among nonwhites almost double that for whites?

Is the family a failure to the point that marriage is virtually obsolete among Americans?

That Census Bureau report prompted me to rummage through recent literature, seeking some answers.

The first thing I ran into was talk of money, or a shortage of it, as one of the major causes of marital breakup. This might explain the staggering number of black divorces, given the fact that black families have only a trifle more than half the money that a white family has to spend — thus divorce is almost twice as prevalent among blacks.

And there lies a key to the hidden tragedy of our current economic mess. Every announcement of more massive layoffs, of a new spurt in unemployment, surely means trouble for thousands of marriages.

But what about the overall increase in divorce? Surely the money situation for the average family did not worsen so drastically between 1960 and 1974 as to account for a doubling of marital breakups!

Some experts say that the "sexual revolution" is to blame. In this era of single couples living together openly, of wife-and-husband-swapping, people just don't attach the same importance to lasting fidelity in a marriage arrangement.

Just as a lot of the "shame" has been lifted from premarital sex, so has much of the stigma been lifted from divorce.

Some "experts" claim that sexual explicitness in books, films, theater, even television, is to blame for the upsurge in divorces. They insist that couples who lived for years in what they thought was sweet sexual compatibility have had their happiness jarred by "how to" books and X-rated movies that lead them to feel, consciously or subconsciously, that they have been cheated out of "higher" standards of sexual performance.

It sounds plausible, but I hate to think that any sizable number of marriages break up because the husband or wife is dazzled by Linda Lovelace or by the books and movies produced by boasters, liars, exhibitionists and other characters, who have nothing more to bring to marriage than a tattered copy of Penthouse. Still others blame "women's lib" for putting new strains on marriage, weakening the institution of the family.

Whatever the reason for the increase in divorces, it has left 1,700,000 black families and 4,500,000 white families with females at their head.

And that is bad news for millions of children.

Question of loyalty for pilot

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

DENVER — A part of the history of commercial aviation — the saddest part — is a history of collisions. The industry knows human collisions also. Such a story slowly is unfolding here in Denver.

Kilpatrick

The story chiefly involves John Ferg, a United Air Lines pilot whose seniority ranks him within the top third of United's pilot-roster. The collision involves a collision of loyalties—between a pilot's loyalty to his union on the one hand, and his loyalty to his conscience, his company, and his passengers on the other.

Let me pick up the story on the afternoon of July 19, 1971, when a United 727 was flying a long milk run from Philadelphia to Denver. The flight was in the command of Captain A. E. Raney.

Somewhere south of Chicago, Raney's copilot and his engineer smelled a "burning smell" in the cockpit, as if an electrical short circuit had occurred. They followed certain checking procedures, and the smell went away. Then the odor appeared again as the flight approached Denver. According to some subsequent testimony, Raney overreacted. He cut the plane's electric power, which meant that the crew could not be certain the landing gear was fully lowered. He donned an oxygen mask. He began the prescribed checking procedures, but then abruptly declared that he was going in for a landing. Over the protest of his crew, he took the plane in at high speed, skidded off the wet runway, and caused damage in excess of $500,000 to the aircraft.

The National Transportation Safety Board, after an investigation, attributed the accident to pilot error. Raney had "failed to follow approved procedures." He had "misjudged his speed," and he had improperly operated his flight controls.

United fired him. Raney objected to the dismissal, and following the customary industry-union pattern, the firing went to an arbitration panel. It was here that the human collision occurred.

John Ferg had known Raney for many years, had flown with him, and had observed him in the demanding closeness of the cockpit. Ferg regarded Raney as a headstrong flier, not suited for emergency command. When Ferg learned of the arbitration hearing, he volunteered to testify as an adverse witness. It was a painful decision, for Ferg is a strong union man. He had held high office in the Air Line Pilots Association, and he believes absolutely in the union's valuable role in the pilots' behalf.

But Ferg felt other values rank even higher. On Oct. 30, 1972, he took the stand against Raney. Five months later, before the panel had upheld Raney's dismissal, Ferg received a harsh letter from his union. The letter denounced him for testifying against a fellow pilot. He was charged with taking "uncoordinated individual action" instead of going along with "pre-planned group cooperation." The letter concluded:

"Therefore, we, the Master Executive Council of the United Air Lines' pilots, pursuant to our resolution, hereby officially censure you for having taken the witness stand as a company witness to testify to the possible detriment of Captain A. E. Raney."

The union's stinging disciplinary action has cost Ferg dearly. In an effort to have the censure rescinded, he already has spent $7,000 in legal fees and court costs. He and his family have experienced the cold shoulder from long associates. But many other brother pilots, sharing Ferg's courageous concern for the public interest, have rallied to his side. William W. Lawrence, a veteran United captain, has launched a legal aid fund for Ferg.

The nation's airlines carry some 200 million passengers a year. Their lives depend absolutely upon the skill and steadiness of the men in the cockpit. For the pilots' union to punish a pilot who puts the passengers' interest in first place is grossly wrong. If the union won't correct that wrong, perhaps the next Congress will.

Auto industry cuts jolting the economy

The automobile industry is not in a recession, said a United Auto Workers official the other day. "It's in a depression."

The remark came on the heels of the layoff of 64,200 Chrysler employes and before the announcement by General Motors that it was closing nine car assembly plants. The industry-wide total of temporarily or permanently idled workers has passed 140,000 and continues to climb.

If the ripple effects of slashed automobile production have not yet developed into a tide sweeping through the economy — one of every seven jobs is connected with the fortunes of the auto industry in some way—and if panic has not set in among the unemployed workers and the communities dependent upon the auto companies' payrolls, the major reason is a system of company-paid supplemental unemployment benefits (SUB) won by the UAW back in the 1950s.

Combined with state unemployment compensation, SUB can give an experienced worker up to 95 per cent of his normal after-tax income for up to a year. For workers laid off since automobile sales began nosediving last winter, this has meant — so far — the difference between difficult times and real trouble, and for the country — so far — the difference between a recession and a full-scale depression.

What is becoming cause for concern, however, is the fact that nearly half the currently unemployed in the auto industry have already been off the job for some time, some were laid off as long ago as last January. These workers are nearing the end of their special layoff benefits, as well as state unemployment compensation.

As UAW vice president Irving Bluestone points out, "SUB was intended to meet the normal ups and downs of the industry, not with a disaster."

He noted that the drain on the SUB fund at General Motors has reduced it from $245 million in October, 1973, to $102 million at the end of this October. Under the contract between the company and the union, as the money in the fund goes down, the duration of the benefits to the eligible employes is reduced.

President Ford has proposed three months of extra unemployment benefits for all workers whose eligibility has run out, not just those in the auto industry, as well as a program of new public works jobs for the long-term unemployed.

But these are only palliatives for a sickness that lies at the very heart of a deeply distressed economy itself. (NEA)

State Department coddles congressmen

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — At the State Department, the only celebrities who get more ruffles and flourishes than a visiting pasha or ranking commissar are senators and representatives intent on globetrotting at public expense.

A call from Capitol Hill electrifies State's $585,000 a year staff of 25 congressional liaison experts, all trained to pacify and pamper the legislators who control the department's huge annual budget.

The cable and memo files at Foggy Bottom overflow with tale after tale of the diligence with which the State Department coddles congressmen. Now after a two-month Freedom of Information battle, my associate Bob Owens has gained access to some of the files' finest tidbits.

About a year ago, for example, the State Department indiscreetly alerted too many agencies about a congressional junket to Europe for a NATO parliamentarians' meeting. This infuriated Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, whose subcommittee writes the State Department's budget.

Hays, who is called "The Terrible Tempered Mr. Bang," by battle-scarred diplomats, furiously threatened to "break off diplomatic relations with the Department of State," according to one internal memo. Moreover, he fumed, he was going to wreak his revenge by taking a bite out of State's budget.

In a memo "for the record," Assistant Secretary of State Marshall Wright wrote, "At 2 pm...Wayne Hays called me. He was furious...." State had undiplomatically sent out 114 copies of a cable concerning the NATO junket. "Not more than two would have been needed," Hays roared.

Beside himself, Hays told Wright that he "was not going to put up with this (expletive deleted) any longer." As retribution, Hays intoned, he was going to "reduce the amount of money available (to State) for paper by about three quarters."

That, declared Hays, "would keep (State) from sending copies of cables all over the damn town." As it turned out, Hays did not make good on his threat.

Indeed, Hays told us that his call "did the trick" and forced State to end some of the paper proliferation. The mercurial Hays added amiably that he "didn't hold (the incident) against them."

Another thick file of cables shows how powerful Rep. Leonor Sullivan, D-Mo., requested and got a special transformer in her luxurious Swiss hotel lodgings so she could plug in her hair dryer.

Apparently State feared Mrs. Sullivan's hair dryer might short-circuit and cause an international incident. They sent six copies of their cables on the subject to the National Security Council.

"Rep. Sullivan requests transformer be placed in hotel room large enough to be used for hair dryer," the State Department cabled its mission in Geneva. "Transformer will be placed in Rep. Sullivan's Hotel du Phone room as requested," the diplomats wired back.

But Mrs. Sullivan, who more often can be found protecting the taxpayers' money than spending it, had still more requests. She wanted to know whether the room would be big enough for her tastes. The diplomats in Geneva apparently whipped out their yardsticks for they answered with a "Priority" cable:

"1. Single rooms are approximately 11 to 12 feet by 18 feet. 2. Double rooms are approximately 15 feet by 18 feet." Mrs. Sullivan took the larger, costlier choice spending $59.67 a day for single occupancy of a double room.

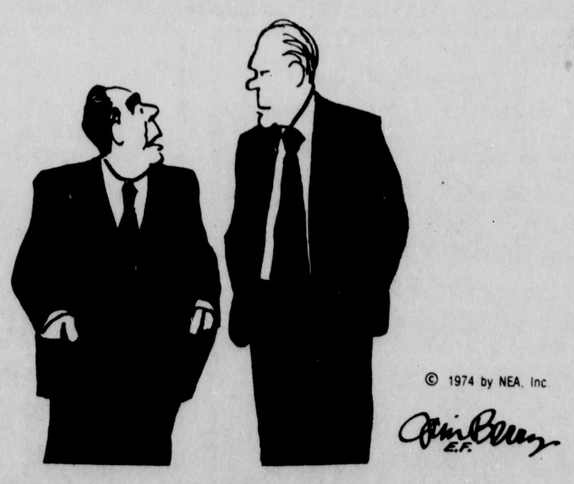

She told us she was abashed that copies of the cables "went to every Tom, Dick and Harry and were sent 'Priority'."

Today's thoughts

"And he said to them, 'Go and tell that fox, 'Behold, I cast out demons and perform cures today and tomorrow, and the third day I finish my course. Neverthleless I must go on my way today and tomorrow and the day following; for it cannot be that a prophet should perish away from Jerusalem.' " — Luke 13:32, 33.

Hospital move unfair

In regard to the recent article concerning Bothwell Hospital's financial situation, I as an employe would like to express my opinion.

All employes, regardless of status and seniority, have been docked work hours. Some of us have been docked as much as 16 hours a week per bi-weekly pay period, some as little as five hours. As the situation now stands, laundry workers, custodians and janitors are working MORE hours than registered nurses and registered dieticians.

How can our only hospital function and give quality care when we can't even work our rightful full hours? One begins not to care what happens if no one cares about them.

One begins to hope one doesn't get sick enough to be hospitalized, because it may be one of those days when the registered nurse has gone home because her hours "were up," or the cook not there because it's one of her many days off.

Burakumin are called 'Japan's invisible race'

By BARRY SHLACTER
Associated Press Writer

IZUMI, Japan (AP) — Japan's much touted postwar economic miracle never made it to Izumi Buraku.

The 10,000 residents of the hilltop ghetto of dilapidated houses and foul-smelling cesspools are outcasts. They are called "Burakumin"—literally "people of the village."

They represent a social problem few Japanese admit still exists, although there are three million Burakumin in Japan. Most live as do the people in the ghetto of Izumi Buraku — deprived of basic civil rights and ostracized.

The ghettos are found in western and southern Japan, in prosperous industrial cities such as Izumi. Some Burakumin have fled to Tokyo, where they are able to pass as average Japanese and escape the barriers of prejudice.

★ ★ ★

The men of Izumi Buraku are forced to eke out lives as day laborers, usually with gaps between jobs.

Others are "four-and-a-half-mat" manufacturers, running cramped home workshops which turn out costume jewelry or woven goods. They are finding it increasingly difficult to compete with the efficient modern plants nearby.

Few Burakumin are hired to work in Izumi's factories.

Once called "Eta," meaning "full of filth," the Burakumin are descendants of people involved in trades deemed "impure" centuries ago because of social and religious conventions. These trades included leatherworking and basketweaving.

Forced to dwell for generations in specially-designated villages apart from the rest of the population, a cordon of ignorance has been built up in the population around them, reinforcing the discrimination.

Although racially and culturally no different from other Japanese, they are in the eyes of many unfit for employment or marriage. Two anthropologists who studied the Burakumin and the prejudice they face call them "Japan's invisible race."

"Very few high school graduates from here can join large companies as regular, full-time employes," said Kenkichi Sakai, 51, a resident of Izumi Buraku and a spokesman for the community.

"They don't tell us it's because we are Burakumin, but that's always the reason," he said. "We're told something like — 'You live too far from the factory' or 'You should go to a batter company.'"

A recent government report admitted that much of the ancient discrimination remains intact.

The report said Burakumin are not guaranteed freedoms the rest of the population of 107 million takes for granted — the right to freely choose a spouse, an occupation or an area in which to live. Burakumin are deprived of many educational opportunities, the report added.

But Sakai says living conditions are gradually improving in Izumi Buraku.

"Nine years ago the city began piping water into the buraku. Before it reached neighborhoods all around us, but we still had to use wells. Of course, we don't get city gas like the rest."

The Japanese government is spending $141 million this year to build sewers, roads, public bath houses, centers for the aged and public housing in the country's Buraku ghettos.

In Sakai City, several miles from Izumi, furturistic split-level public housing projects already have risen next to the hobels, producing a sharp contrast, and, for Burakumin, a new sense of hope.

One official boasted that the Sakai construction is the best public housing project of its kind in Japan. But discrimination remains strong in Sakai City and residents say it's as difficult as ever to land a good job.

Satoru Izutani, 25, who has had a dozen different jobs since leaving junior high school and today is a carpenter's assistant, said that until a year ago he was ashamed to admit he was a Burakumin.

"I would get off the bus several stops past the the Buraku so no one would know I lived there," he said. But whenever he applied for a job, the company soon knew he was a Burakumin from his address — Kyowa-Cho, Sakai City's well-defined buraku area.

Mrs. Nishiko Sakamoto, 64, a poet, heads the politically oriented Buraku liberation movement in Sakai City's Buraku. Illustrating the despondency of many Burakumin faced with discrimination, she told of a man working at an Osaka post office who committed suicide after word spread that he was a Burakumin.

"He came from a nearby prefecture to escape prejudice in his hometown, but became despondent after realizing it had followed him to Osaka," she said.

"After he killed himself, the assistant manager of the post office took responsibility for the incident by also committing suicide."

Only a small percentage of Burakumin are active in the Buraku Liberation Movement.

Heirs of feudal prejudice

Children of the outcast ghetto of Izumi Buraku, Japan, play happily in dilapidated surruundings. But as Burakumin they're likely to grow up deprived of basic human rights and subjected to ostracism. Although racially and culturally these heirs of feudal prejudice are no different from other Japanese, Burakumin in the eyes of many are unfit for employment or marriage. (AP)

Culture shared through program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Out in Iowa, a Mexican performer with an Irish brogue is drawing enthusiastic audiences with poetry recitations, lectures and guitar concerts.

Down in Kentucky, a woodcarver from Ecuador is demonstrating and conducting workshops in a craft which has declined over the years — the rich tradition kept alive by isolated artists like himself.

Up in Maine, a Brazilian poet and composer of operatic, religious and folk music is giving performances, accompanied by his wife on the flute.

And in Ohio, another Brazilian, a folk dancer, is instructing and participating in theater and the dance at a Cleveland community arts center known as Karamu House.

Fernando Marrufo, poet, lecturer, guitarist; Jorge Rivadeneira Almeida, woodcarver; Robert Lima de Souza, poet, composer; and Julia Pereira de Mello, folk dancer, are among the Latin American artists who have started to come to this country through the Artist-In-Residence program.

Begun this year, the program is sponsored by the Partners of the Americas people-to-people organization and supported by funds from the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the U.S. State Department.

The Artist-In-Residence program is providing an opportunity for gifted Latin Americans to share their native cultures by teaching, performing and lecturing in small towns as well as big cities.

The program is designed to build a greater mutual understanding and communication between the cultures of Latin America and our country, explains Alan Rubin, president of the Partners of the Americas.

Through that organization, 41 U.S. states maintain direct, highly personal working relationships with 43 Latin American states or areas in 18 countries.

And through this relationship people are helping other people raise their quality of life with programs in public health and medicine, education, agriculture and sports, as well as the cultural exchange, Rubin points out.

Selection of the artist is made by the Latin American Partner state. The U.S. Partner state then follows by arranging with a university or college in its state to provide the three month's residency for the artist.

Outlets for the artist's talents include not only the campus but the community as well.

Augusta College in Georgia was the first of the schools to serve as an artist's residence. Joao Batista de Querios, a Brazilian from the state of Pernambuco, conducted the school's first course in sculpture and helped design the college's first studio for sculpture.

Partners plans to extend participation to more states, to provide a broader mix of artists' skills, and to expand the program, with artists visiting more than one state.

Beginning next year, U.S. artists will be visiting Latin America under a Partners of the Americas program which complements the Artist-In-Residence program.

The "Sharing American Folklore" program, as it has been named, will seek greater mutual understanding and communication. It, too, is being made possible through a grant from the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs at the State Department.

The program will cover a broad range of talents. Among them: folk singers, craftsmen, modern dancers, barber-shop quartets, spiritual or soul groups, square-dancers, choral groups, bluegrass artists, marching bands, members of Indian tribes performing traditional dances and folk art teachers.

"Sharing American Folklore" also hopes to stimulate and involve private citizens in the broader problems of health, education, nutrition, rehabilitation and adequate social services by means of cross-cultural exchange, and share the creative spirit and cultural heritage of Partner states with the Partner country as part of the Bicentennial celebration, Rubin says.

Ann Landers

Girl's natural father should be informed

Dear Ann Landers: How do I handle this situation? When the time comes, I want to do the right thing. I have a daughter, 19, who has a terminal illness. Should I notify her father who lives in another state? He has had no contract with her in a long time. She telephoned him a few years ago when she was within 100 miles of him and he was cool and unresponsive.

Would it be best to (a) get in touch with him now, (b) wait until it is over or (c) not at all? If you should suggest the third alternative what excuse would I use if he reprimands me and says I should have let him know?

My present husband adopted this child several years ago, but the decision is up to me. I will do as you say since I am in no condition to trust my own judgment. — Troubled.

Dear T.: Put the burden where it belongs, on the girl's natural father. If he wishes to come to see his daughter, he will do so. If not, he won't be able to blame you for not giving him the opportunity.

Please don't tell the child that her father has been informed unless you can also tell her he is coming. It might make the girl unhappy if she knew he was called and didn't want to see her.

———

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has an "odd" sense of humor. Of course, the "joke" is always at someone else's expense. Usually mine.

Often he will hand me the paper and say, "I just read your letter in Ann's column." The letter is invariably a complaint against a wife who nags, drinks, or cheats. (I don't do any of those things.) Today's letter was from a woman who was asking about a facelift.

I'm three years older than my husband and never felt self-conscious about it — until recently. My neck is getting a little "crepey." I think perhaps I ought to have something done about it but I don't know how to go about selecting a doctor. Any advice? — A Little Long In The Tooth.

Dear Tooth: Select a doctor whose work you have seen and admire. One word of caution, however. If it's just your neck that's "crepey," leave the rest of yourself alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in that letter from the woman who cautioned against marrying the best-looking, most popular fellow in school — the smoothest dancer and captain of the football team. She observed, "They make lousy husbands. Such men are spoiled and selfish and their wives never know if the guy is really hers." Now, will you please print a letter from a husband?

I married the cutest girl in town. She was "Miss Personality Plus," a glamorous and exciting date, but a lousy wife from the start. Today at 65, she is bitter and unhappy because she no longer holds the center of the stage and hasn't for many years. Her frustration and anger have added another 20 years to her looks.

Being cute and popular and a world of fun at a party are perishable qualities. Before long that cute, young girl is replaced by someone who is younger and cuter.

How I envy the guy who married Plain Jane, the gal I passed by. She has character, strength, and durability and turned beautiful with the years. Too bad I couldn't see beyond my nose. — Voice of Experience.

Dear Voice: I hear you loud and clear. Are you listening, students?

Buffalo Invitational

S-C, Buffalo meet in first round

(Democrat-Capital Service)

BUFFALO — First-round play in the Buffalo Invitational Basketball Tournament opens here tonight. The night's first game pits top-seeded Joplin Memorial against the Buffalo jayvees. The fourth and fifth seeded teams, Lebanon and Springfield Central, will clash in tonight's other game.

Tuesday, Sedalia Smith-Cotton, seeded third, will take on sixth-seeded Buffalo to open the two-game card. Macks Creek meets second-seeded Springfield Parkview in the final opening-round game of the evening.

No games are scheduled Wednesday or Thursday; action resumes Friday and wraps up on Saturday.

Two lettermen, a pair of 6-4 junior forwards, head Coach David Porter's lineup for his varsity high school debut with the third-seeded Tigers, Pat and Pete Fiene.

Senior Greg Koetting, 6-3, will open at center, with the starting back court nods going to Cliff Callis and Tommy Buckner.

Porter, who was an assistant coach under Jim Dinsdale before Dinsdale accepted the head coaching job at Indian Hills Community College in Clarinda, Iowa, said last week he didn't feel Buffalo would have that much advantage playing on their own court.

"Crowd-wise, it will be of some advantage to them, but it shouldn't make any difference since we have to play a good brand of basketball everytime we go out on the floor," he said.

It's the opening game of the season for both clubs.

Bakken provides win

Cards clinch tie for berth in playoffs

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Jim Bakken and the St. Louis Cardinals got their kicks, Pete Gogolak and the New York Giants didn't and as a result the Cards clinched a tie for their first playoff berth since 1948.

Bakken booted three field goals, including a 36-yard game winner with three seconds to play, to vault the Cards to a 23-21 National Football League victory Sunday. It kept them in first place in the National Conference East, one game ahead of Washington.

The crucial kick was set up when Gogolak squibbed a kickoff to avoid a runback by Terry Metcalf. But the tactic backfired when Hurles Scales returned the ball 18 yards to the New York 46.

"The first time we kicked to Metcalf he ran it back well," said NewYork coach Bill Arnsparger. "So we squibbed it the rest of the time. It didn't work too well the last time."

Three complete passes by Jim Hart and an 11-yard Metcalf run later, Bakken kicked the Cards to a 9-2 record and the Giants down to 2-9.

Bakken, a 14-year veteran, said "If someone was to ask me if I'd like to come in in the last seconds with a game riding on a field goal I'd tell him, 'If it's all right with you, I'd just as soon not.'" But he said he didn't feel any heavy pressure.

After 36 and 32-yard field goals by Bakken in the first quarter, the Giants moved from their own 42 to the St. Louis 13 and a fourth and two situation. Arnsparger chose to try for the first down instead of a field goal, but Leon McQuay's run came up a foot short.

"I thought we needed more than three points to win," said Arnsparger.

With the Cards trailing 14-13 with 4:50 left in the game Mel Gray hauled in a 45-yard touchdown pass at the goal line.

"Even with my bad hamstring I felt I had enough speed to beat" defensive back Jim Steinke, said Gray, who called the play himself.

"I didn't see Mel when I threw it. I just threw as hard and as far as I could," said Hart, who completed 25 of 42 passes for 259 yards, 211 of them in the second half. It was Gray's 17th career touchdown, eight against the Giants.

The Giants took the lead 3:34 later on a 17-yard touchdown lob from Craig Morton to Walker Gillette, setting the stage for Bakken's heroics.

Ron Johnson, on a 2-yard run 21 seconds before halftime, and Bob Tucker, on a 29-yard Morton pass in the third quarter, scored touchdowns that gave New York a 14-6 lead. A 16-yard scoring strike from Hart to Earl Thomas brought St. Louis to within one point two minutes before the end of the third quarter.

Cardinal Coach Don Coryell said he wasn't disturbed by the rash of close calls his team has had. In seven of their victories the Cards have outscored their opponents by a total of only 33 points.

Morton, who has revitalized the New York offense since his arrival from Dallas five games ago, said, "The offense was working great. I don't know what we have to do to win."

In their previous three games, the Giants have lost by six points to Kansas City, in overtime to the New York Jets and by one point on an Errol Mann field goal with two seconds left against Detroit last week.

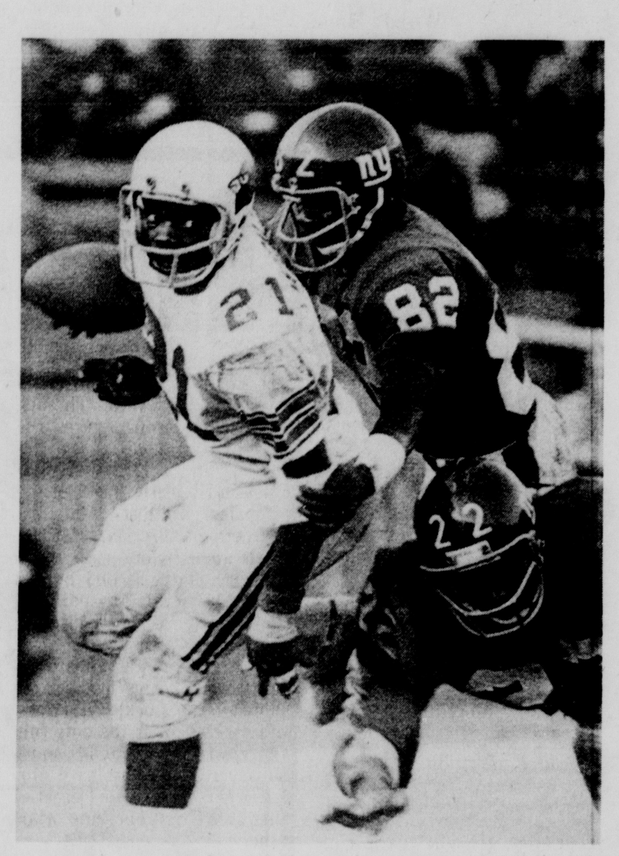

Morton completed 21 of 35 passes for 257 yards.

Metcalf was the game's leading receiver, with seven catches for 42 yards. Gray nabbed five for 102 yards.

New York's Joe Dawkins led all runners with 65 yards on 12 carries.

Argentine winners

BUENOS AIRES — Guillermo Vilas of Argentina defeated Spain's Manuel Orantes 6-3, 0-6, 7-5, 6-2 and Raquel Giscafre, also of Argentina, beat countrywoman Beatriz Araujo 7-5, 1-6, 6-2 to capture the singles titles in the $24,000 Argentine Open Tennis Tournament.

Metcalf in hand

New York Giants' Ray Rhodes (82) and Honor Jackson (22) move in to contain St. Louis Cardinals' runningback Terry Metcalf on this second-half kick return of Sunday's game in New Haven, Conn. St. Louis won the game in the closing seconds on a field goal by Jim Bakken, 23-21.

Chiefs drubbing is worst in 15 years

CINCINNATI (AP) — "Football is a funny thing," mused Cincinnati center Howard Fest after the Bengals dealt the once-mighty Kansas City Chiefs one of their worst defeats in 15 years. "It's like betting on race horses. You never know what they're going to do.

The slow-talking Texan was one of a half dozen newcomers in the injury-depleted lineup who played a key role in the Bengals' stunning 33-6 rout of the Chiefs Sunday.

The Bengals were off to the races early, scoring on their first drive on the way to a 27-6 halftime lead. Quarterback Ken Anderson, continuing his recent aerial success, tied a club record with four touchdown passes.

But the brightest note was sounded by second-year running back Ed Williams, who pumped up a lifeless running game with a club-high 94-yard rushing effort.

It was greeted by Coach Paul Brown as the best news of the day. The Bengals, still in the thick of trying to land a playoff berth have sorely missed a solid ground game.

They'll need a balanced attack next Monday night against the Miami Dolphins, one of their major hurdles in reaching the playoffs.

The victory left Cincinnati with a 7-4 record. The Chiefs slipped to 4-7.

While Anderson was firing scoring strikes of 19, 18, 6, and 11 yards, Cincinnati's revived defense smothered the Chiefs.

Kansas City was permitted only 34 yards rushing. Jan Stenerud's field goals of 27 and 47 represented only the fifth time in Chiefs history that they were limited to six points or less.

Dropped passes plagued veteran quarterback Len Dawson throughout the rain-drenched afternoon.

"We counted seven that were dropped and should have been caught in the first half alone," lamented Coach Hank Stram. "It was the worst game we've played all year."

Stram praised Anderson as "a great young quarterback."

Brown pointed to a blocked punt by reserve Bob Maddox as the game's turning point. Maddox, considered the quickest lineman on the club by his coaches, slapped down a Jerrel Wilson punt and retrieved it near the goal ine for a touchdown. It put the Bengals ahead, 20-0 early in the second quarter.

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. — Bob Gilder, from Oregon, sank a six-foot birdie putt on the third extra hole to win a threeway playoff with Bob Charles and Jack Newtown Jr. in the New Zealand Open Golf Championship.

SFCC opens home season tonight

Roadrunners win tourney title

"We played with more consistency than we did a week ago in Crowder," said Bill Barton Sunday before sending the Roadrunners through a light workout in the Agriculture Building.

"Our consistency against Southeastern Iowa (Keokuk) last night (Saturday) in the finals was the best we've done all season," he added on State Fair Community's College's 69-61 win over host Southeastern Iowa of Keokuk, which netted SFCC the tournament victory.

The Roadrunner victory, which Barton felt came as result of his team's defense, board play and poise, upped the team's record to .500 (2-2). To gain entry into Saturday night's championship game, the Roadrunners notched their first win of the season by downing Black Hawk College of Moline, Ill., 91-77.

Sunday's practice was geared at tonight's opponent, Southwest Baptist College (Bolivar). The game is the Roadrunners' home opener.

"We can't afford to have a let-down," sayd the SFCC coach. "That could hurt us more than anything."

The Roadrunners may be without the services of their leading scorer, Charles Johnson, against the Bearcats. Johnson, a 6-3 freshman forward from California, Mo., suffered an injured right hand against Keokuk. Sunday the hand was swollen and hindered Johnson's shooting.

"If he is out, I certainly hope it's not for long. This is a tough week for us with Southwest tonight and our classic coming up here Friday and Saturday," Barton said.

Johnson leads the team in scoring with a 22-point average. He tossed in 20 against Black Hawk and followed that with an 18-point effort Saturday.

The board play of 6-9 sophomore center Stan McNeill and 6-7 freshman forward Lyonell Hardin were main keys in the Roadrunners' weekend success.

"Stan especially helped us with 16 rebounds in the game. His play in the final 30 minutes of the game was outstanding," said Barton.

"Our poise though is what really saved us," Barton feels.

"After we built up our 10-point lead, they cut it to four real quick. We just sucked up and started playing with more desire," he added.

Barton's main worry about Southwest Baptist is the Bearcats' size.

"They've got two outstanding freshmen in Dave Logan, Ave, Mo., and George Ridens, Norwood, Mo. Both are 6-6 or better, and they've got Mark Taylor (6-8) a transfer from Robert Morris," he said.

Also on the Bearcats' roster is 6-6 Jeff Schnakenberg, a freshman from Sedalia Smith-Cotton.

"If we don't have a let-down, which is common after a big win or two, and we play the type of basketball we did over the weekend, we stand a good chance against them," Barton concluded.

Tipoff for tonight's game is set for 8 p.m.

Ohio State voted to Pasadena

Suggest change in selection method

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Woody Hayes of Rose Bowl-bound Ohio State thinks the Big Ten must change its procedure for selecting its representative to the New Year's Day classic.

"The selection now has become more important than the game," Hayes said Sunday before learning the Buckeyes were the Big Ten's choice in a secret Rose Bowl vote by conference athletic directors.

"We're going to have to change this thing. It's not right," he said.

Hayes suggested the Big Ten adopt a plan such as the Pacific-8 uses in selecting its Rose Bowl team. The West Conference follows a predetermined set of guidelines rather than resorting to secret balloting.

Southern California will face the Buckeyes again in this year's Rose Bowl.

Hayes should draw strong support for his views from Michigan, again barred from a postseason appearance despite the nation's best record over the past three years, 30-2-1.

One of the Wolverines' defeats was inflicted Saturday 12-10 by Ohio State, leaving both national powers with identical 10-1-0 records overall and 7-1-0 conference marks.

Bo Schembechler, under a two-year probation from Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke for chastising the 1974 Rose Bowl vote, refused even a "no comment" this time.

Some Big Ten coaches feel other conference teams besides the champion should be allowed to play in bowls.

"I don't care to go to another bowl game," Hayes said, "but if the league is in favor of it, I'm not opposed to it.

"I always felt the Rose Bowl is the greatest and that's where we should go," he added. "We got it (the Rose Bowl vote) because we earned it. Our kicking game was the difference Saturday."

He was referring to a school record four field goals by Czechoslovakian immigrant Tom Klaban and 45.2-yard punting by Tom Skladany, who broke a Big Ten single season record with his average of 45 yards per punt.

However, if Michigan's Mike Lantry had made his 33-yard field goal try in the closing seconds, the athletic directors' vote would have been a formality.

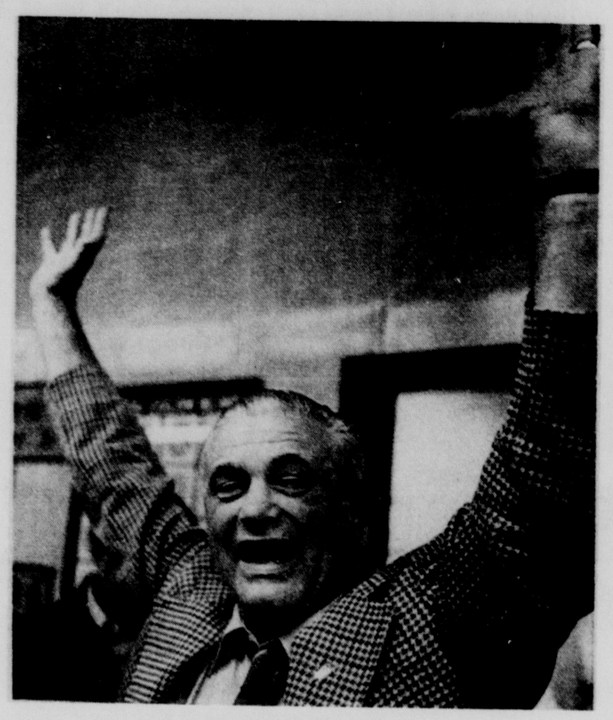

The Wolverines would have won 13-12 and been the undisputed conference champion with an 8-0 record.

Hayes and some of his key players were hardly blase about making a third straight trip to the Pasadena classic against Southern Cal.

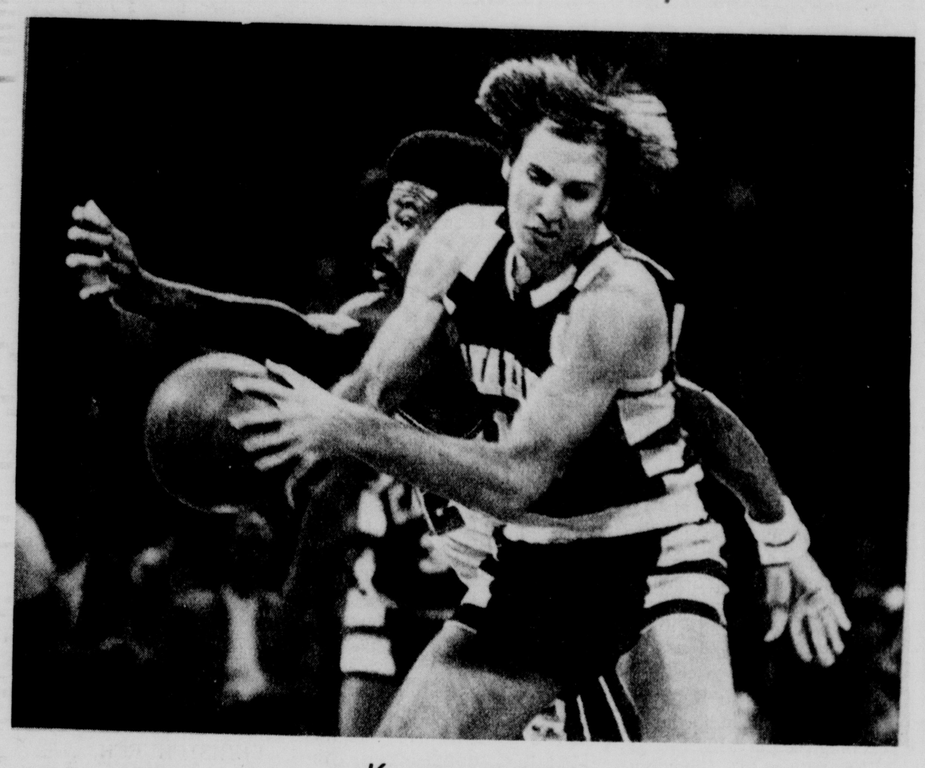

"The excitement is greater every year I go to the Rose Bowl. The time it isn't, that's when I quit coaching," said Hayes, 61, who has taken six previous teams to the oldest of the bowls.

Hayes predicted the 1975 Rose Bowl game would be the greatest New Year's Day contest.

"John McKay is a great coach," Hayes said. "His Southern Cal team must be hot as a firecracker now. I think they are a team developing late."

Memphis Sounds stop skid

MEMPHIS (AP)—The Memphis Sounds ended a seven game losing streak with a 103-94 triumph over the St. Louis Spirits in American Basketball Association action Sunday night. But the victory was expensive.

Rick Mount, Memphis' leading scorer, suffered a separated shoulder in a collision at the end of the first quarter. He will be sidelined for about five weeks.

"Even when we win bad things seem to happen to us," said Coach Joe Mullaney. "In this case it was losing Rick Mount."

Mount, a guard, has averaged 21 points per game.

Former Spirits center Tom Owens, who was traded to Memphis, was the high scorer with 25 points. He notched 15 of those points in the second half and had 17 rebounds in the game. Maurice Lucas was the top St. Louis scorer with 18.

Memphis jumped to a 30-14 lead at the end of the first quarter and held St. Louis for the remainder of the game.

Rookie Marvin Barnes did not play for St. Louis but a Spirits official indicated he would join the team Monday in St. Louis.

"It wasn't who we were playing," said Owens, referring to his former team. "I didn't care who it was. I was just happy to be playing."

"I haven't had much playing time lately and I was glad to get some action," he said. "The (losing) streak was depressing and that was the biggest thing about tonight...that we broke it."

Cagers open Friday

Tipoff nears in Big Eight

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Basketball rolls onto the Big Eight Conference sports scene Friday night.

Three games are scheduled on opening night. Oklahoma and Oklahoma State play in a doubleheader at Oklahoma City. The Sooners battle Tulsa, and O-State faces Oklahoma City University. Iowa State is host to Mankato State.

Kansas, a big favorite to repeat as conference champion, begins its season Saturday night when all of the remaining clubs also swing into action. The Jayhawks play at home against Northeast Missouri State, and Coach Ted Owens has all of his players intact except All-Big Eight guard Tom Kivisto.

Three other teams also launch their campaign at home. Nebraska entertains South Dakota State, Missouri tangles with Wisconsin Oshkosh, and Kansas State battles Montana State. Colorado visits California.

Owens has already served notice that the Jayhawks, who finished fourth last year in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship tournament, are the team to beat although he is quick to point out, "We won some close games last season. That might not happen again this year."

Owens likely will start Roger Morningstar, Dale Greenlee, Norm Cook, Rick Suttle and Donnie Von Moore, the latter a sophomore.

Oklahoma and Nebraska seem the best bets to challenge Kansas. The Sooners have Alvan Adams, the league's leading scorer in 1974, and Oklahoma Coach Joe Ramsey says any team with a guy like Adams "has a good shot at the title."

Nebraska will be led by Jerry Fort, a super player. The Huskers also have two other starters back, Steve Erwin and Larry Cox. "Offense is certainly where we're going to have to improve," asserts Husker Coach Joe Cipriano.

Iowa State, playing under new Coach Ken Trickey, undoubtedly will have a new look built around three of last year's regulars, Hercle Ivy, Craig DeLoss and Larry Loots. By the time the conference season arrives, Trickey expects to have his Cyclones ready.

Four starters are back at Oklahoma State, Andy Hopson, the league rebounding pace-setter; Ronnie Daniel, K.C. Kincaide and Lafayette Threatt. Coach Guy Strong figures the Cowboys "will be much improved" and will find out how much in the early stages of the campaign against Alabama, Southern Califvrnia, UCLA, Texas and Baylor.

Kansas State, second behind Kansas last year; Missouri and Colorado are all in the process of rebuilding. K-State lost all of its five starters and apparently will place a heavy load on the shoulders of Chuckie Williams.

Steve Dangos is the only full-time starter back at Missouri. However, the Tigers have nine lettermen around, and eight of them started at one time or another.

Colorado's hopes just about went down the drain when Dave Logan had knee surgery resulting from a football injury.

So. African team wins World Cup Golf crown

CARACAS (AP) — South Africa's Bobby Cole, never one to take a big lead for granted, worried his way to a double victory in the 22nd World Cup Golf Tournament.

"I really wasn't very sure we would win," said Cole after his victory Sunday. "You know, if you haven't done it before you're not sure what you can do."

Cole and teammate Dale Hayes combined to give South Africa team honors by five strokes over the Japanese team, and Cole captured the individual title by five shots over Japan's Jumbo Ozaki.

Cole, 26, and the 22-year-old Hayes became the youngest pair ever to win the World Cup.

Cole fired a closing two-under-par 68 over the 6,763-yard Lagunita Country Club course for a 72-hole total of 271. Hayes finished with a 72 for 283, giving the South Africans a 554 total, six shots below par.

Ozaki shot a 71 for 276 and teammate Isao Aoki added a 73 for 283.

Golfer Lee Trevino won the 1971 and 1972 British Opens.

The United States, which had putting problems all week, finished third at 563 with Hale Irwin winding up third in individual play at 283 and Lee Trevino two shots back at 285.

Irwin and Trevino changed from the small ball to the larger American ball on the last day and said they should have done it earlier.

"That was the big mistake we made. We should have been playing it all week," said Trevino. "I didn't play well all week."

"I'm very disappointed and somewhat embarrassed," said Irwin. "But a good team won — a very good team."

It was the second World Cup victory for South Africa. Gary Player and Harold Henning won it in 1965 in Madrid. Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller won for the United States last year.

St. Louis U., Edwardsville in rematch

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis University Billikens, still smarting over their first soccer loss to rival Southern Illinois-Edwardsville earlier this month, will get a chance to avenge that defeat.

The Bills, riding Tim Logush's goal with less than five minutes left, edged Cleveland State, 1-0, Sunday to move into the NCAA Division I Midwest regional final against SIU-E next Friday.

Southern Illinois blanked Indiana, 2-0, Saturday to gain its berth in the contest.

SIU-E squeezed by St. Louis U., 1-0, on Nov. 9 for the Cougars' first victory in nine contests against the Bills, then ranked No. 1 in the country.

St. Louis U., 16-2-1, is now rated second, while SIU-E, 12-20, is third. Howard University holds the No. 1 spot.

The national finals are set for Dec. 6 in St. Louis.

Singles champs

BRISBANE, Australia — Australians Bob Giltinan and Evonne Goolagong each won singles finals in the Queensland Grass Court Championship. Giltinan scored a 6-2, 7-6, 6-7, 6-3 victory over West Germany's Uli Marten and Goolagong downed fellow Aussie Cynthia Doerner 6-1, 6-2.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "One of the nice things about getting old is that the smart, young players try to fool you."

Jim: "Are you putting me in that class?"

Oswald: "No. You aren't old but you certainly aren't young any more. Fifteen years back you might have made the same first discard East made. Today, you wouldn't be that obvious."

Jim: "All right. Tell your story."

Oswald: "I ruffed the second diamond, entered dummy with the king of hearts and led the nine of clubs for a finesse. West took his king and led another diamond. I ruffed that and played two rounds of trumps. East dropped the three of spades on the first of these trump leads and a diamond on the second one."

Jim: "I wouldn't have been that obvious fifteen years ago. Maybe twenty-four years back, when I was learning as a freshman at Notre Dame."

Oswald: "In any event, it was obvious he wanted to look like a man who didn't hold the queen of spades. It didn't take me more than half-a-second to lead a spade to dummy's king and play him for that all-important card."

Sugar farmers are also having money problems

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WINDSOR, Colo. (AP) — If you think the current price of sugar is a ripoff, don't take your gripe to a sugar farmer unless you're ready to listen to his money problems, too.

The domestic farmers who grow sugar beets and sugar cane are the original source for nearly half the sugar consumed in the United States.

As greater worldwide demand and weather disasters around the globe push sugar prices far beyond levels of a year ago, the payments and potential payments to farmers are jumping up, too.

But sugar beet growers like Manuel Pineda and Jack Boegel of this northern Colorado farm area will tell you that burgeoning prices for fuel, equipment and fertilizer are eating away at their seeming bonanza.

And for diversified farmers like these men, some of the sugar money is just an offset for their recent losses in the cattle business.

Fuel costs have doubled in the past year, pushing up the cost of operating tractors, harvesters and other implements in the $75,000 fleet of specialized equipment that Boegel uses on his 199 acres of sugar beets.

"Damned fertilizer," Pineda grimaced at another expense. "When we were a quarter of the way through this year, we were already up to all of last year's fertilizer bill."

Many in the sugar growing business say costs are changing so rapidly that growers' traditional accounting-analysis figures can't keep up. But they estimate it's taking a market sugar price of about 30 cents a pound just to break even.

With sugar now past 50 cents a pound, that means good profits for farmers and processors.

But it also means that year-ago sugar prices of 16 or 17 cents a pound aren't likely to return.

Despite profits running as high as 20 times those of a year earlier, sugar processing firms say their previous earnings were so low that a big jump is not unconscionable.

They'll have a chance to make their case to the government this week at hearings on sugar prices called in Washington by the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

They're also expected to have their say at congressional hearings next week when the House Agriculture Committee inquires into soaring sugar prices.

In the wake of this year's weather-devastated cane and beet crop, there seems no prospect for improved supplies until the next crop comes in next year.

Bigger supplies in relation to demand could ease prices.

But sugar men, from farmers to financial experts, don't predict any big rush to increase U.S. production until they see whether prices will hold at or near the current levels.

With those fuel, fertilizer and equipment costs going up for farmers like Pineda and Boegel, and with four years lead time needed to build a big sugar mill, forecasts remain wary despite current good times.

U.S. confident Syria will agree to extension

PEKING, China (AP) — After a week of hard negotiating, the United States is now optimistic and confident that Syria will agree to an extension of the U.N. disengagement observer force on the Golan Heights, a senior American official said today.

The life of the 1,250-man contingent, which has been keeping the peace between Syria and Israel, was due to expire Nov. 30. Its dissolution would have removed a barrier to renewed warfare between the hostile neighbors.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger conducted the negotiations by cable to the U.S. Embassy in Damascus and through the Syrian Embassy in Washington while traveling in the Far East with President Ford. Some of this work was done aboard the Spirit of '76.

The understanding was reached before Ford and Kissinger arrived in Vladivostok last weekend for a minisummit with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, newsmen were told.

This timing eliminated a major source of Mideast tension from the Ford-Brezhnev meeting.

The Soviets have been rearming Syria, their client state, since the October 1973 war while the United States pumps arms into Israel.

Kissinger concluded his tour of the Middle East last month without word from Syria on whether it would permit the United Nations to extend the observer force.

Israel has since charged substantial movement of military equipment by Syria on the Syrian side of the demilitarized zone on the Golan Heights. Israel mobilized several thousand troops on its side.

Kissinger reassures Chinese of 'normalization' intentions

PEKING, China (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew into China today, called on Premier Chou En-lai and reassured Chinese leaders later at a dinner that a "normalization" of relations is a fixed principle of U.S. foreign policy.

"In the last years the relations between our two countries have moved ahead steadily," Kissinger said in a toast. "I am here to continue this process and I am confident it will succeed."

Kissinger, who is staying in China until Friday, is prepared to discuss further progress toward normalizing relations between the two countries and brief the Chinese on the new U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms understanding.

A senior American official emphasized that the visit, the seventh by Kissinger and first in a little over a year, was arranged long before the just-completed summit between President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in Vladivostok. The official said no major announcement was expected.

On the way to the Great Hall of the People on Monday night, the secretary of state stopped off at a rest home for a 30-minute visit with Chou, who is 76 and ailing. Kissinger described his partner in detente as bright and alert.

With Kissinger are his wife Nancy and children from his former marriage, Elizabeth, 15, and David, 13. Mrs. Kissinger missed the dinner — her husband said she had an upset stomach — but Elizabeth and David were with him at the head table, sipping Mao Tai, a potent Chinese brandy.

"Ganbei,"—or Bottoms Up in English—Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua said to the boy. David smiled and sipped some more.

Chiao, recently named foreign minister, will conduct most of the conversations with Kissinger. Chiao, who has been chairman of the Chinese delegation to the annual U.N. General Assembly since 1971, is understood to be following the line of Premier Chou in warming relations with Washington.

The 1972 Shanghai communique provides for such normalization after almost a quarter century of unfriendly relations.

Champion tree spared

MARTHASVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Anything that has been around for 300 years has a solid claim to squatter's rights, and that's the way many people feel about an oak tree near the Missouri River east of St. Louis.

Missouri's state champion chinkapin oak tree will be spared after pleas by local citizens and groups moved the state Highway Commission to re-route improvements on U.S. 92 in Warren County.

The tree, on the land of Oscar Huegel, is 66 feet tall, has a spread of 72 feet and is 15 feet, 3 inches in diameter at chest height.

Asst. State Forester John Wylie of the conservation department, who keeps the state record tree list, says the big oak probably is close to 300 years old.

It is one of a group of new state record trees, most of which have been discovered by Harold Calvert, a tree enthusiast who lives in Carrollton.

The old state champion paw paw tree blew down in a summer storm, but Calvert came up with a new one, owned by James Waters of Norborne. The new champ is 22 feet high, 2 feet in diameter and has a 16-foot spread.

Denzil Thomas, White Rock, is the owner of the new butternut hickory champ, an 86-foot tall giant. Calvert also found the new honeylocust champion in Carroll County in Wakenda Township on Louise Riske's land. It is 82 feet high with a 74-foot spread.

Calvert also nailed down a new champion pin oak on the Robert Harris place near Carrollton, which is 81 feet high with a 60-foot spread, and a 14-foot, 3-inch circumference.

Calvert also found a champion Kentucky coffeetree on the August Akerman property in Carroll County that is 78 feet high with a 70-foot spread.

Wylie also added a new national champion to the several Missouri already has. A wahoo, owned by Earl Foster, Warrensburg, which was the state champion, now has been recognized as the national champ as well by the American Forestry Association.

It is 20 feet high, has a 20-foot spread and is 2 feet, 2 inches in diameter.

Man's two hearts beating together

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Heart transplant pioneer Christiaan Barnard this morning implanted a second heart inside a 58-year-old man in a milestone operation, Groote Schuur Hospital announced.

The patient, who was not identified, was reported in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit. Both hearts were beating together, a hospital spokesman said.

Barnard's heart transplant team, making its 11th operation but its first to implant a heart without removing the patient's diseased heart, began work at midnight Sunday. The heart used in the operation was that of a 10-year-old Cape Town girl killed in an accident Sunday.

The spokesman said that after the child was clinically dead, her heart was kept beating artificially inside her body until the life-saving surgery could begin. The South African Press Association said the recipient is married with children.

Barnard performed the first heart transplant operation on Dec. 3, 1967, at Groote Schuur. He was assisted in his latest operation by his brother, Dr. Marius Barnard, and the Groote Schuur transplant team.

The patient's original heart was left in the body, and the second heart was transplanted to help the damaged heart and "improve the patient's blood circulation," according to the hospital spokesman.

Hospital authorities identified neither the recipient nor the donor.

The operation was Barnard's first heart graft since Dec. 2, 1973.

There have been 13 previous heart transplant operations in South Africa, including two in Durban by Dr. Ben le Roux and one by Marius Barnard. All three patients died, Le Roux's shortly after the operation and Barnard's after 51 days.

Two of Christiaan Barnard's patients are still alive. They are Miss Dorothy Fisher, who received a new heart on April 17, 1969, and Dirk van Zyl, whose operation was May 10, 1971.

Two women drown in boat mishap

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP)— The bodies of two women doctors, one from India and one from Korea, have been recovered from Lake St. Louis following a boating accident, authorities said.

Police said the body of Dr. Rama Daish, 50, of Meerut, India, was found shortly after midnight Sunday and the body of Dr. Kyong Park of Seoul, Korea, was recovered about 10 hours later.

The women had gone boating Saturday night with Dr. Sei Young Choi of Lake St. Louis and Dr. Kirim A. Chang, a staff member at St. Louis County Hospital, authorities said, when the 14-foot boat was apparently swamped by a wave.

The two men were able to swim to shore, police said. Chang was treated for exposure and shock.

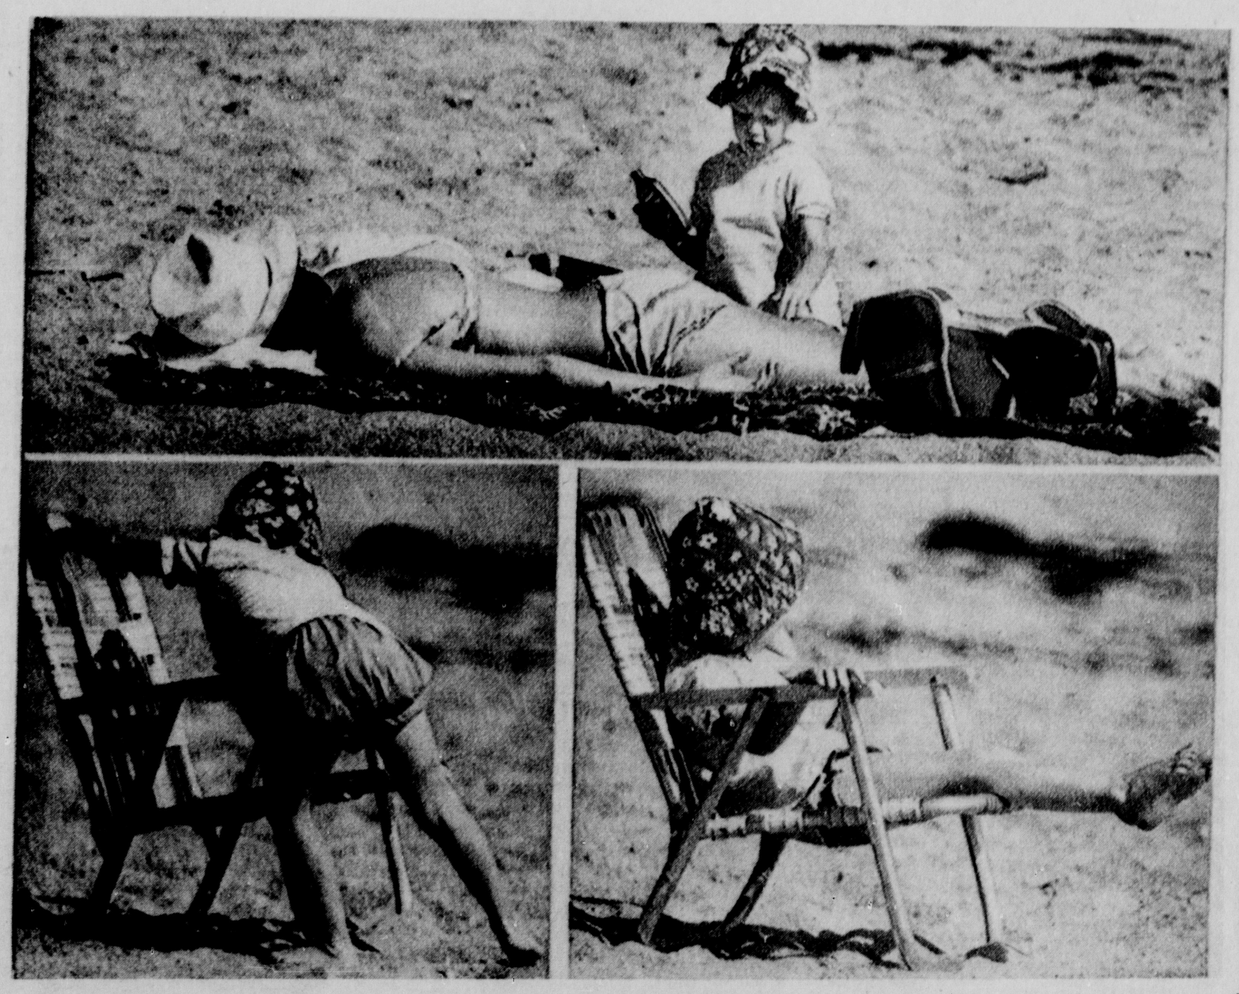

The victims were in the country to attend a one-month program at Barnes Hospital, officials said.

Choi is an instructor in psychiatry at Washington University Medical School and works at Malcolm Bliss Mental Health Center.

Order halts sales of oil, gas leases

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick directed Robert Whisenant of Phoenix, Ariz., today to halt further sales in Missouri of oil and gas leases on tracts of land in New Mexico.

The order requires Whisenant to furnish a report of his past sales in Missouri and his books and records.

MORE MONEY IN ARKANSAS BANKS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State-chartered banks in Arkansas did well in the 10 years from 1963 to 1973.

State records show their deposits increased 198 per cent, to a total of $1,651,986,122.

People in the news

URBANA, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Clarence J. Brown Jr.'s 19th century home was damaged by an apparent gas explosion Sunday, authorities said. No one was injured.

The Ohio Republican and his wife were in Washington at the time. Tenants who live on the top floor of the three-story house were also away.

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, who reportedly suffered a heart attack last May, is still recuperating in a Peking hospital, China's official Hsinhua news agency says.

Chou was visited Sunday by an economic delegation from the government-in-exile of Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Hsinhua said Sunday.

The agency did not mention Chou's condition.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francoise Giroud, France's secretary for women's affairs, says "the most important thing in the world" for a woman is to learn a trade.

"To stick to a man because you can't pay the rent is something abominable," she said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Mrs. Giroud, who was named to the new cabinet post this year, also said women should be included in all areas of decision making.

TAFT, Okla. (AP) — Television star Redd Foxx turned over $10,000 to this tiny eastern Oklahoma community for a start on a swimming pool so the chilren "won't have to go 10 or 12 miles to go swimming in the summer."

Foxx, star of "Sanford and Son," came to this predominantly black community Sunday. An estimated 500 persons — probably more than the population of Taft — jammed the Taft elementary school auditorium for the ceremony.

It was Foxx's second trip to Taft. Last summer he was named chief of police of Taft.

Asked why he picked Taft to help, he told newsmen, "Taft selected me."

And the townspeople said they will ask the state legislature to change Taft's name to "Redd Foxxville, Okla."
